Part 3. Rules, Regulations, and Consent (see reverse side)

- The Computing Lab and its equipment are to be used for academic purposes. Commercial use of the Computing Lab computer systems is prohibited.
- You may not give out the door codes to unauthorized people.
- You may not bring food or drink into the Computing Lab.
- Shared systems such as those connected to the Internet or World Wide Web (WWW) provide special services and require special responsibilities. You are responsible for the safeguarding of your computer account on any such system. You must follow the Department Rules for choosing your password, you should change your password frequently, and should not disclose it to anyone.
- You may not share your account with any other users and you are responsible for any activity which is associated with your account.
- You may not use this equipment to transmit abusive, anonymous, unsolicited, obscene or fraudulent messages.
- You may not install software on any machine. All software installs are done by department IT staff. Unless it is an emergency, you should not save work to the local PC drives. All of your files should be saved in your home directory.
- You may not copy or distribute software without permission.
- If a class is being held in the Computing Lab, and you are asked to leave, you must comply with the instructor's request. You will be able to work remotely if you are in the middle of something important.
- Do not power down computers or disconnect network cables.
- Problems with any software or hardware should be reported to twalter@hunter.cuny.edu
- Accounts inactive for more than 90 days will be deactivated.
- All accounts have storage quotas. You will not be able to exceed your disk quota, the system will deny you permission to save files. If you need additional storage send an email to twalter@hunter.cuny.edu with your request.

I have read the above Rules and Regulations and I agree to abide by them. I understand that if I do not abide by them, my account will be suspended for the remainder of the semester.
