Preface and Authorization

Hunter College has provided education for public health professionals since 1970. In 1998, the Urban Public Health Program was established within the School of Health Sciences to provide baccalaureate and masters level education in public health. In 2008, Hunter College was granted authority by the New York State Division of Education to also award the Doctor of Public Health Degree, jointly with the Graduate School and University Center (Graduate Center). In 2009, the Chancellor of the City University of New York (CUNY) and the Presidents of Brooklyn, Hunter, and Lehman Colleges and the Graduate Center, submitted an application to the Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH), the body which accredits schools and programs in public health, to create a collaborative School of Public Health at Hunter College (CUNY SPH). In June 2010, the CUNY Board of Trustees (BoT) approved the governance plan for the CUNY SPH (SPH Governance Plan) that incorporates the public health programs at four Consortial Campuses, with Hunter College as the lead institution. At that time, the BoT also established the School of Urban Public Health (UPH) as a separate unit within Hunter College.¹ UPH is a consortial member of the CUNY SPH.

These by-laws of UPH are designed to serve as a means for faculty, administrators and students in the School to participate in the development and implementation of policy, and the promotion of academic and professional standards to achieve their common goals.

ARTICLE 1 – ORGANIZATION

1. Structure

1.1. Programs. UPH shall be organized into Programs. The Programs represent core knowledge areas within public health, and shall include, at minimum: Community Health Education, Environmental and Occupational Health Sciences, Epidemiology and Biostatistics, Public Health Policy and Management and Nutrition and Food Sciences. For purposes of this document, the term “program” shall refer to one of these specialty disciplines. When a Program offers a course of study at more than one academic level (e.g., BS, MS) the course of study at each level shall be referred to as a component degree program. The academic offerings of each Program shall reflect health, academic and professional specialty disciplines and accreditation guidelines.

1.2. Program Membership. Each member of the public health faculty shall be a member of a program. To recognize the interdisciplinary scope of the CUNY
