ASAP Advisory Board

- Mimi Abramovitz, DSW, the Bertha Capen Reynolds Professor of Social Policy at Hunter College School of Social Work and the Graduate Center, writes extensively about women, work, poverty, and social policy, especially as it affects low-income women and women of color. She is the author of the award winning Under Attack, Fighting Back: Women and Welfare in the US, and co-author of The Dynamics of Social Welfare Policy and Taxes Are A Women’s Issue: Reframing the Debate. She is now at work on the book Gender Obligations: The History of Low-Income Women’s Activism Since 1900. Abramovitz is the recipient of seven prestigious awards from major professional associations, including the Council of Social Work Education and the New York City chapter of the National Association of Social Work. In 2007 she was inducted into the Columbia University School of Social Work Hall of Fame.

- Sarah Chinn is the executive director of the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies (CLAGS) at the Graduate Center and Associate Professor of English at Hunter and The Graduate Center. Her work explores questions of race, sexuality, and gender in U.S. literature and culture, particularly in the 19th century. She is the author of Technology and the Logic of American Racism: A Cultural History of the Body as Evidence and The Invention of Modern Adolescence: Children of Immigrants in Turn-of-the-Century America.

- SJ Dodd is Associate Professor at the Hunter College School of Social Work and the Graduate Center, where she teaches social welfare policy, research, and human sexuality. Dodd is the co-principal investigator on a trauma-informed program funded by U.S. Health and Human Services aimed at reducing sexual risk behaviors and substance use in 8th grade students in East Harlem. She is also the program evaluator for the National Resource Center for Permanency and Family Connections. Dodd has served on the Hunter College LGBT Policy Institute steering committee from its inception, has analyzed heterocentrism in U.S. social policy as a call to action for social workers, and is developing a study to examine gender identity through the experiences of pregnant lesbians. Dodd serves as a (Continued on next page) consulting editor for the Journal of Teaching in Social Work and the Journal of Gay and Lesbian Social Services.
ASAP Advisory Board, continued

- Michelle Fine chairs the Social/Personality Psychology Program at the Graduate Center, where she is Distinguished Professor of Social Psychology, Women’s Studies and Urban Education and a founding member of the Participatory Action Research Collective/Public Science Project. She has taught in many countries, including New Zealand, Cyprus, China, Israel/Palestine, Canada, and Turkey. Before joining CUNY in 1992, she taught for 12 years at the University of Pennsylvania. Called to provide expert testimony in a number of high-profile cases, she is also co-author of Becoming Gentlemen and Off-White: Readings on Society, Race, and Culture, among many other publications. Fine was awarded the Janet Helms Distinguished Scholar Award (1994), the Lewin Memorial Award (2010) and a Spencer Foundation National Mentoring Award (1998).

- Dagmar Herzog is Professor of History and the Daniel Rose Faculty Scholar at the Graduate Center. She is the author of numerous articles and several books in the histories of sexuality and gender, religion, and Holocaust studies, including Sex after Fascism: Memory and Morality in Twentieth-Century Germany, Sex in Crisis: The New Sexual Revolution and the Future of American Politics, and the forthcoming Sexuality in Europe: The Twentieth Century. She is editor of Lessons and Legacies VII: The Holocaust in International Perspective and Brutality and Desire: War and Sexuality in Europe’s Twentieth Century and co-editor of Sexuality in Austria and the forthcoming After the History of Sexuality. Her current research concerns the history and future of psychiatry, with special attention to conceptualizations of trauma and desire.

- Rosalind Pollack Petchesky, Distinguished Professor of Political Science at Hunter College and the Graduate Center, received her B.A. summa cum laude from Smith College. After studying international law in France as a Fulbright Scholar, she received her PhD in Political Science from Columbia University. Petchesky came to Hunter in 1987 to head the Women’s Studies Program, and in 2000 she joined the faculty of the Graduate Center in both political science and the Women’s Studies Certificate Program. Her numerous articles and books on issues of reproductive and sexual rights have been translated into five languages and have influenced scholars, advocates and legal forums. The U.S. Supreme Court cited her award-winning book, Abortion and Woman’s Choice, in the landmark 1992 decision Planned Parenthood v. Casey. Recently Petchesky’s research has focused on the intersections between human rights, health, gender equality, and globalization. She also works with the transnational group (Continued on next page)
ASAP Advisory Board, continued

Sexuality Policy Watch (www.sxpolicies.org).

• Victoria Pitts-Taylor is Professor of Sociology, Director of the Center for the Study of Women and Society, and Coordinator of the Women’s Studies Certificate Program at the Graduate Center, as well as Professor of Sociology at Queens College. She is the author of Surgery Junkies: Wellness and Pathology in Cosmetic Culture and In the Flesh: The Cultural Politics of Body Modification, as well as many articles and book chapters on social and cultural aspects of the body, medicine, and health and wellness. She is editor of the two-volume Cultural Encyclopedia of the Body, co-editor of the journal Women’s Studies Quarterly, and has won an Advancement of the Discipline Award from the American Sociological Association.

• Joe Rollins is Executive Officer of the Political Science doctoral program at the Graduate Center and Associate Professor at Queens College. Author of AIDS and the Sexuality of Law: Ironic Jurisprudence, he received his Ph.D. from the University of California, Santa Barbara in 1998 and specializes in the fields of public law, gender and sexuality, and research methods. His current research, funded by a grant from the Wayne F. Placek Fund of the American Psychological Association and a visiting scholar’s position at the Center for the Study of Law and Society at the University of California, Berkeley examines changes in the legal language of sexuality and will be published in the forthcoming book, Legally Straight. Rollins has served on the board of directors for the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies (CLAGS).

• Anahí Viladrich is a sociologist and medical anthropologist from Argentina. She received a PhD with Distinction in 2003 and an MPhil in Sociomedical Sciences (Medical Anthropology) from Columbia University in 2000, and a MA with honors from the New School University in 1999. Before joining Queens College in 2010, she was a Associate Professor at Hunter College where she directed the Immigration and Health Initiative. She is also Associate Professor at the CUNY doctoral program in public health. Viladrich has published extensively on gender and reproductive health, immigration, transnational networks, and Latino health in the United States. She is writing a book on Argentine immigrants in the United States and is a domain editor for the first Encyclopedia of Immigrant Health to be published soon by Springer.

• Diana Romero is Associate Professor at the Hunter College School of Health Sciences and an epidemiologist whose work focuses on public policy, poverty policy, and reproductive health policy. She has conducted critical analyses on a range of issues stemming from this focus, including the welfare state family cap.

(Continued on next page)
ASAP Advisory Board, continued

policy, fertility and disadvantage among low-income adults, and the health impacts of violence for low-income women. She directs the Latino Health Fellowship Program at Hunter College and teaches courses on research methods, including qualitative, quantitative and mixed methods, and health policy for undergraduates and graduate students.

- Rupal Oza is director of the Women and Gender Studies program at Hunter College and Associate Professor of Geography and Associate Professor of Women's Studies at The Graduate Center. Her work focuses on political economic transformations in the global south, the geography of the right-wing politics, and the conjuncture between development and security. Her first book, The Making of Neoliberal India: Nationalism, Gender, and the Paradoxes of Globalization, was published in the United States and India. Her current project examines the link between special economic zones, the discourse of security, and Hindutva politics in Gujarat, India.

- Carol Royle is Assistant Dean for Research at Hunter College School of Nursing and Professor of Nursing at Hunter and the Graduate Center. Her research focuses on adolescent reproductive health. She was the principal investigator on an NIH-funded clinical trial testing the efficacy of two interventions to promote dual method use (condoms and hormonal contraception) by urban adolescent African-American and Latina women. She has also studied teen pregnancy prevention and the effect of advanced provision of emergency contraception on condom use by teenage girls. Dr. Royle is a pediatric nurse practitioner, maintaining a clinical practice in adolescent health in a community-based pediatric office in Washington Heights, where she provides reproductive health care to adolescent girls. She is writing a book examining the impact of reproductive health policy on maternal and infant mortality nationally and globally.

Contact us at asap@hunter.cuny.edu for more information.