Helen Rehr, Emerita Professor at Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, was a remarkable woman who made enormous contributions as a clinician, program innovator, mentor, teacher, administrator, policy advocate, practice researcher, and benefactor to social work in health and mental health settings both locally and internationally.

A native New Yorker, her focus was always “global.” Among other international efforts, she established the International Enhancement of Leadership Program at Mt. Sinai whereby senior health and mental health social workers from Australia, Hong Kong, Israel, New Zealand, Singapore, and Taiwan honed their clinical, managerial, practice-research, and policy skills and shared their experience with each other as well as their Mt. Sinai colleagues. Several went on to get PhDs and to join the academy while others assumed significant leadership positions in their home countries within their chosen fields and agency settings.

Helen was instrumental as well in establishing a triennial International Conference on Social Work in Health and Mental Health at which social work practitioners and academics meet on an equal footing to share ideas, research findings, and program innovations. Starting at Hebrew University in Jerusalem, the conference has since been held at universities in Melbourne, Tampere, Quebec, Hong Kong, Dublin, and Los Angeles. In 2016, it will be held in Singapore.

Always insistent on parity between the academy and the agency, she was a persistent gadfly to academic pomposity. Until the end, she was an ardent cultural ambassador of the diverse charms of New York City. Her intellect, creativity, courage, personal warmth, and generosity of spirit are greatly missed by social workers throughout the world. This conference is dedicated to her memory and her vision.

Message from the Dean

We are proud to host the 3rd International Conference on Practice Research at Silberman School of Social Work at Hunter College. We thank the Doris Siegel Memorial Fund, Division of Social Work and Behavioral Sciences, and the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai for co-sponsoring this conference with us.

Our conference theme, “Building Bridges Not Pipelines: Promoting Two-Way Traffic Between Practice and Research,” has been designed as a ground-breaking experience that will begin to mitigate the tensions between practitioners, practice organizations, and research efforts, identifying innovative models, and exploring ways to achieve meaningful results through dialogue. Our most inventive international thinkers will exchange ideas and learn from each other. The conference is the culmination of the exceptional career of Dr. Irwin Epstein, a longstanding professor of research at Silberman and an architect of the conference, whose career has been dedicated to the advancement of practice research both in the U.S. and internationally. He will be joined by extraordinary plenary speakers from various countries who will present “views from the practice research bridge.”

Our guests will benefit from Silberman’s extraordinary faculty who bring special insight into the work that’s being done in New York City. And indeed, what better venue for the conference than the Big Apple with its diverse populations and compelling social work issues? NYC has been called “the biggest collection of villages in the world,” and we hope participants will avail themselves of the city’s great restaurants and myriad cultural treasures.

Our hope is that the conference will be a memorable one. An impressive group of presenters with a variety of perspectives will help us use this auspicious moment to build bridges across the domains of practice and research.

The Division of Social Work and Behavioral Science at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai and the department of Social Work of the Mount Sinai Hospital is pleased to be a co-sponsor of the Third International Conference on Practice Research through the Doris Siegel Memorial Fund. The fund was created to honor a visionary social worker who led the Mount Sinai Social Work Department and the Social Work Division of the Medical School from 1953 to 1971.

The mission of the fund is “to encourage and support social work in its efforts to enhance the social effectiveness of health and medical care.” Every three years the fund sponsors a conference on a topic of importance for social work practice. Previous conference subjects included “International Social Health Care: Policy, Programs and Studies,” “Interprofessional Practice and Education in Health,” and Behavioral and Social Sciences in 21st Century Health Care.” The fund’s board endorsed the proposal to join with the Silberman School of Social Work to sponsor this important conference on practice research.

The first executive secretary of the fund was Dr. Helen Rehr—another visionary. It is fitting that the conference recognizes Helen’s contributions and leadership in encouraging and conducting practice research. She was one of social work’s best friends and most objective critics. She had a keen intellect, creativity, and intense and warm engagement with ideas and people.

We welcome you to New York and look forward to three days of deliberation and learning about this important issue.

Gary Rosenberg, Ph.D.
Executive Secretary - Doris Siegel Memorial Fund
Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai
As Organizing Committee Chair, I am delighted to welcome you to the 3rd International Conference on Practice Research. Co-sponsored by the Silberman School of Social Work, the Division of Social Work and Behavioral Science at The Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai, and the department of Social Work of the Mount Sinai Hospital, with a grant from the New York Community Trust, the conference is intended to promote a two-way traffic of ideas on the “bridge” between practice and research in social work.

Spanning a largely ignored international gap, our Call for Abstracts received twice as many submissions as expected from countries throughout the world. International in scope and methodologically pluralist in spirit, the conference offers a remarkable range of pre-conference practice-research workshops, leading-edge plenary speakers, oral paper presentations, pre-organized group presentations and experiential workshops by practice-researchers from twenty different countries. In addition, the conference spotlights a set of emerging practice-research scholars who represent the “next generation” of individuals who will undoubtedly devote their careers to social work knowledge-building of this kind.

Dedicated to the memory of Dr. Helen Rehr, the conference represents a global expression of the principles, values, wisdom, hard work, and fun that all who knew her were privileged to enjoy. We welcome you to New York and hope that you leave this conference enriched intellectually and lastingly connected internationally.

Irwin Epstein, Ph.D.
Organizing Committee Chair
Helen Rehr Professor of Applied Social Work Research (Health & Mental Health)
Silberman School of Social Work at Hunter College
Plenary Speakers

Jan Fook
Kingston University, UK

Jan Fook is currently Professor of Education (Critical Reflection) and Director of Research in the School of Education, Faculty of Health, Social Care, and Education, Kingston University and St Georges, University of London. She has held professorial positions in Australia, Norway, Canada, and the UK, mostly working in critical social work and practice research. Most recently she is focusing on working with critical reflection, both in training and working with practitioners, but also to better research critical reflection and its outcomes. She is particularly interested in how critical reflection can both improve and support practice and also help research the experience of practitioners. Her recent books include Critical Reflection in Context: Specific Applications in Health and Social Care.

Alex Gitterman
University of Connecticut School of Social Work, USA

Ilse Julkunen
University of Helsinki, FI

Ilse Julkunen is a professor in practice research in social work, Department of Social Research, University of Helsinki, and the scientific leader of the Mathilda Wrede Institute. Her research concerns youth and marginalization, youth transitions, and practice research in social work. She is particularly interested in methodological research issues that contribute to the knowledge base of the social work practices and has recently published a book, Practice Research in Nordic Social Work, together with professor Edgar Marthinsen. Professor Julkunen is currently Chair of the National Society for Social Work Research.

Riki Savaya
Tel Aviv University, IL

Professor Riki Savaya teaches at the Bob Shapell School of Social Work at Tel Aviv University. A considerable portion of her research in the last two decades has focused on practice issues. The issues she has written about include, among others, use (and non-use) of managerial and clinical information systems in the social services; sustainability of social programs, process, and outcome evaluation; and intervention with groups of different cultures. For the last few years, she has been intimately involved in the development and introduction of a clinical information system in the Social Welfare Departments of the Tel Aviv-Yafo municipality. The assessment and intervention guidelines which are at the core of this system have been developed by the department’s social work staff. Research on the system’s introduction, usage, effectiveness, and consequences is being conducted jointly by Prof. Savaya and social work practitioners.
Plenary Speakers

Timothy Sim
Hong Kong Polytechnic University, HK

Professor Sim’s main practice and research interest is to develop culturally sensitive family-based treatment in Asian contexts, particularly for the Chinese family that is in constant flux. He has been involved in children and adolescent-health-related-behaviors practice research, with a particular focus on family dynamics of adolescent drug abusers, as well as problematic video game use among adolescents. In the wake of the 5.12 Sichuan earthquake, he has been working closely with Chinese scholars and social work practitioners in developing psychosocial practice research projects in the earthquake-affected areas.

Bruce Thyer
The Florida State University of Social Work, USA

Bruce A. Thyer, Ph.D., LCSW, is a professor and former Dean with the College of Social Work at Florida State University. He previously held an appointment as a Distinguished Research Professor of Social Work at the University of Georgia. Dr. Thyer has edited the Journal Research on Social Work Practice since its founding in 1991. He has authored over 250 articles in peer-reviewed journals and over 80 book chapters and published over 25 books, including Quasi-Experimental Research Designs (Oxford, 2012), Program Evaluation: An Introduction (5th edition, Cengage, 2010), The Handbook of Social Work Research Methods (2nd edition, Sage, 2010), Preparing Research Articles (Oxford, 2008), and A Social Worker’s Guide to Evaluating Practice Outcomes (Council on Social Work Education, 2007). Dr. Thyer is a licensed clinical social worker in Florida and Georgia and a board-certified behavior analyst.
Plenary Speakers

Lars Uggerhøj
Aalborg University, DK

Lars Uggerhøj, Ph.D., is a Professor in Social Work and Head of the Danish Master’s Degree Programme in Social Work at Aalborg University, Denmark. His research focuses on practice research, service user experiences, and involvement and power relations in social work. He is an experienced social worker and lecturer and has published key books, articles and reports within the field of social work over the last 25 years. He is coordinating and involved in several international networks and sits on the editorial boards of two Danish social work journals.

Martin Webber
University of York, UK

Martin Webber, Ph.D., is a registered social worker with experience of working with adults with learning disabilities and mental health problems. His primary research interest is the development and evaluation of social interventions for people with mental health problems. This includes primary epidemiological or methodological work; ethnographic work to develop intervention models; and experimental work to evaluate the effectiveness of interventions. He is Anniversary Reader in Social Work at the University of York where he established the International Centre for Mental Health Social Research in 2013. He collaborates with colleagues in Europe, India, Australia, and the United States and has a growing number of Ph.D. students who are working on empirical studies in social work.
This conference is part of an on-going series designed to explore and generate innovative approaches to practice-research in social work, highlighting both the everyday architecture of practice and effective ways of integrating research into that architecture, the iterative nature of knowledge production processes and the implications for both knowledge development and social work education.

This conference series began in June 2008 in Salisbury, UK, followed by the May/June 2012 conference at the University of Helsinki in Finland. The first conference brought together interested academics and professionals (organized by SPRING — the Southampton Practice Research Initiative Network Group) in Salisbury, UK, to formulate an international statement on principles of practice-research. Comprised of academic researchers and practitioners from Canada, Hong Kong, Israel, Italy, the Nordic countries, Singapore, the U.K. and the U.S., a core group known as the “Salisbury Forum” authored The Salisbury Statement. The principles articulated in this document were intended for application to social work and more broadly to all professions where the integration of practice research is important.

The organizing question driving the 2012 conference was how do we build a more “robust” base of practice research knowledge in social work? Conference papers, workshops, and posters gave considerable attention to what practice research is, to what the possibilities and barriers to practice research are, and what “robust” might mean in the context of practice research. Papers from the conference and a Helsinki statement summarizing core discussions will be published in a special issue of the journal Nordic Social Work Research.

The 2014 conference extends this work by recognizing gaps and stressors between practice organizations and research efforts, identifying innovative models for exchange, and examining strategies for building greater and more meaningful collaborations among practitioners, service users, and researchers.
Conference Objectives

The organizers of this conference—practice research leaders from several countries—view the New York conference as a means of widening the discussion of practice research by engaging a broader international audience of current researchers, practitioners, and users regarding the role practice research can play in social work knowledge-building. Additionally, we view the New York conference as a means of engaging social work educators regarding the role of social work practice research in educating future social workers to confront the following challenges that could be presentation topics:

• Engaging practitioners and researchers meaningfully in a dialogue about research designs, outcomes, and implementation
• Involving researchers more closely in day-to-day practice contexts
• Involving senior management in order to develop the necessary organizational supports for social work practice research and/or partnering with university-based researchers
• Inviting other research colleagues to adopt multidisciplinary and trans-disciplinary approaches to the dissemination and utilization of social work practice research: What are some of the best ways of disseminating social work practice research through a multi-actor approach?
• Discussing the possibilities and the barriers in the negotiated meeting-points between practice and research.
• Expanding the domain of social work practice research to actively include service users
• Promoting the transformation of practice questions into practice research questions through the active use of critical reflection and critical thinking
• Educating research-minded practitioners at the B.S.W., M.S.W., D.S.W., and Ph.D. levels
• Educating practice-minded researchers through the exploration of applied research methodologies that locate them within various social work practice domains
• Deliberating the changing context of practice (e.g., how can practice research inform the merging health, mental health, and social services in numerous governmental locales around the world?)
• Developing public policy: How do findings from practice research get translated into new, more service-user-relevant policies and practices?

1:30 - 2:45 PM - Oral Papers, Pre-Organized Groups, Experiential Workshops
3:00 - 3:45 PM - Plenary Talk by M. Webber - L. Joubert, Moderator
3:45 - 4:00 PM - Conference Summary - M. Fisher
4:00 PM - Conference Closing - I.Epstein
Presentation Types

With the foregoing categories in mind, we welcomed four types of presentation formats:

1. Oral paper presentations (15 minutes + discussion). The presentations will be organized in thematic sessions.
2. Pre-organized group presentation (proposal requires a group of 4-5 paper abstracts with moderator, 45 minutes + discussion)
3. Experiential workshops (conducted by individuals or groups—approximately 90 minutes). The workshops are planned, structured, and carried out by the submitters. Interactive workshops usually have an introductory part (presentation) and a participatory part (a theme or question to work on).
4. Poster presentations

While the organizers of this conference come primarily from the discipline of social work, we recognize the value of open and constructive knowledge exchange across professions and welcomed contributions from researchers and practitioners in disciplines other than social work.
