Silberman Continuing Education Instructor

Mary C. Bitel

Mary C. Bitel, LCSW, PhD, serves on the faculty of New York University’s Tisch School of the Arts, where she has developed coursework on the integration of the fine and performing arts with theories, skills and dynamics of group work. She is on the faculty of NYU’s International Theatre Workshop in Amsterdam and has been a member of the group work faculty at the Silberman School of Social Work for over a decade. Prior to teaching, Mary was director of GirlSpace, a community center for adolescent girls in East Harlem, where she also practiced group work, individual casework and family work. Mary received her PhD in Social Welfare at the CUNY Graduate Center with a focus on the use of expressive arts in groups; she has written a number of articles on theory and practice of social group work. In addition to her teaching assignments, Mary is a group work consultant to non-profit organizations and arts workers using arts-based activities with groups.
