

F-1 Student Program Extension

International Students in F-1 status, if you are not able to complete all of your program requirements before the expiration date on the PROGRAM OF STUDY section of your SEVIS I-20; you must apply for a program extension.

Eligibility

You may apply for a program extension if:

1. You have continuously maintained lawful F-1 status
2. The delay in completing your program requirement has been caused by compelling academic reasons (such as changes in major field or research topics, or unexpected research problems), or compelling and documented medical reasons. Delays in completing program requirements that are caused by academic probation or suspension are not acceptable reasons for program extensions.

When to apply?

All students should contact the International Students Office at least 60 days before the completion date on your SEVIS I-20. You should make an appointment to discuss your case with an International Student Advisor.

How to Apply?

If you are eligible for a program extension, please prepare this form and bring copies of the following documents with you to your appointment:

1. Your valid passport biographical information page with the expiration date
2. Most recent Electronic I-94 <https://i94.cbp.dhs.gov/i94/#/recent-search> or I-94 card
3. All previously issued I-20s
4. Letter of recommendation from your departmental advisor if the extension request is due to an academic reason
5. Proof of financial support

Please allow sufficient time for your documents to be processed. Failure to follow this procedure will result in the termination of your F-1 Status. Consequently, you will not be eligible to apply for any type of employment, school transfer or any other F-1 benefits. If the "Program End date" indicated below the PROGRAM OF STUDY section of your SEVIS I-20 has already passed, please contact the office immediately.
