The Stages of Memory

Information to be Learned

Forgetting

Information not inputted mainly due to visual or auditory problems or poor class attendance

Information not processed mainly due to inattentiveness

Information is recorded briefly but not rehearsed, so it is not processed into working or long-term memory

Information not understood or was not connected to other pieces of current memory

Information not reviewed sufficiently for it to be stored into long-term memory

Information not connected to reasoning

Information cannot be recalled, either because it was never understood or because the ability to recall the information was impaired

Short-term Memory

Working Memory

Long-term Memory

Abstract Reasoning

Memory Output