Communication Courses

Expanding Your Learning, Decision-Making and Communication Potential

Each of us has a most comfortable style of learning, of making decisions and of communicating with others. These vary widely from individual to individual. Our different styles can create significant hurdles in the work between colleagues, between managers and supervisees, and between staff and clients served. We’ll address the different styles in all three areas, and what we need to understand and pay attention to, so we can interact most effectively with others.

Leadership Courses

Colors of Leadership

To navigate constant and disruptive change, leaders now need to use different tools. They need to act differently, think differently, feel differently, and engage differently to be able to master decision-making in our world of rapid growing complexity. Successful leadership realizes it can't have all the answers. Instead, leaders need to be able to learn publicly, recognize patterns, see around corners, and tap into diverse perspectives. This interactive workshop will look at different business models to foster trust and raise emotional intelligence. It will also provide a deeper understanding of the three major types of leadership: command-and-control, administrative, and innovative.

This class is designed to help leaders both understand the importance of premeditated delegation for time management and agency success and to enable leaders to identify their own strengths & weaknesses, allowing them to delegate strategically and better manage their time. It will help leaders identify the strengths of their team members—learning to whom they should delegate what for greatest productivity. Through a thoroughly hands on learning experience, participants will begin to master the science of strategic delegation, (what, when, to whom, how).

In New York City, the workplace is multicultural, as are the communities served. Unfortunately, cultural differences are often used to judge others, when in fact they are more appropriately used to appreciate the complexity of people and enhance the perspectives brought to problem solving. How effectively does your team or workgroup value and incorporate the contributions from people who may be from “a different culture” rather than unconsciously ignoring or rejecting them? Are you able to bring out the best in yourself and in your employees, team or coworkers in maximizing the value of diversity and inclusion? In the world today, it is critical for leaders, managers and staff at all levels of organizations to understand how their own cultural background, and the range of cultural backgrounds of those they supervise or work with, affect the way they interpret, evaluate and motivate the actions and performance of others. Through an interactive mix of theory, sharing, individual reflection and action planning participants will understand their own cultural perspectives and how to value the perspectives of others, and will identify areas in which they as individuals or their team/unit can improve their effectiveness in working in intercultural settings.
