FOREWORD

As Editors of this publication, we continue to try to provide to both prelaw advisors and prelaw students the most current and useful information possible. In the spring of this year we conducted our annual survey of ABA accredited law schools in the United States in order to update these lists of law school academic programs, clinical programs, available scholarships, admission policies and other information. Two notes, both caveats, should be added here. First, this is really a reference book, a ready reference, we hope. Individual schools should be contacted for more information. Second, both advisors and students should be cautious when selecting a law school on the basis of one or just a few factors such as specialized programs, joint-degree programs, salary ranges, student organizations, etc. For the most part, a legal education is a general education in law and specialization occurs after law school. Applicants should look at the total program presented by a law school and see which school in its totality seems to best meet their needs.

We hope that users of this book will also recognize that these lists are compiled from information received from law schools and that they are, to coin a phrase, “subject to change without notice.”

A very special thank you is owed to Terry Wilkerson who supervised this project this year. This book could not have been completed without her efforts. The editors are greatly appreciative of her abilities and grace throughout this project.

Please note that the authors do not endorse, support or acknowledge the effectiveness or utility of any commercial test preparation or advising program.

LAW SCHOOL ACADEMIC PROGRAMS

Some law schools offer graduate work in a general field of law while others have graduate programs in a specific area of the law. A number of law schools have joint degree programs whereby a student may combine his/her legal studies with course work in another discipline. In these cases some of the credits from the law courses will count toward the graduate degree in the other discipline while some of the graduate work will fulfill a part of the law degree. When these programs are available the individual will generally be able to complete the two degrees in a year less than if they were taken separately. A large number of law schools give special emphasis to certain areas of the law but not enough work to warrant a graduate program.

The information on the following pages has been compiled over time and is updated annually from the responses to a questionnaire submitted to the law schools by Dean Edward Stern of Boston University and Dr. Gerald Wilson of Duke University. Again thanks are due to Ms. Rita Ralston, who shepherded this year's project from beginning to end.

Many schools change their programs from one year to another. After finding the special program in which a student is interested, attention should be given to the website and/or the most recent bulletin of that school. Several schools have indicated that a student might be able to work out another joint degree program on an individual basis.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, when there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA · LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Stern/Wilson Survey.

Second, when two asterisks () appear beside a school, the entry applies to graduates of foreign law schools only.

D. AREAS OF EMPHASIS WITHOUT A GRADUATE DEGREE

Advisors and students should note that the primary function of law school curriculum is to offer a general education in law. In most cases, specialization in one area of the law comes with on the job experience after law school. Caution should be exercised in using this list of “Areas of Emphasis” as the primary factor in choosing a law school. Students should also be aware of the possibility that too narrow specialization may limit job opportunities.

University of Colorado	The University of Colorado participates in a dual program with the University of Alberta (Canada). The student does 2 years in each program and receives both a JD and LLB.
Columbia University	Columbia Law School offers the following Double Degree Programs: J.D./LL.M and J.D./LL.B. with the London School of Economics, University College London, King's College, and School of Oriental and African Studies. J.D./Master with the University of Paris I (Sorbonne). J.D./Master with Sciences Po (Institut d'Etudes Politiques) and University of Paris I. J.D./LL.M. with the Institute for Law and Finance (JohannWolfgang Goethe University, Frankfurt).
Cornell University	JD-Master en Droit (French Law Degree), JD-Master in Global Business Law (French National Law Degree)
University of Detroit Mercy	J.D./LED Mexico; J.D./J.D. Canada
Duke Law School	Duke Law School and a consortium of two French universities, l'Université Paris I Pantheon-Sorbonne and Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (known as "Sciences Po"), offer a dual JD/Master in Global Business Law degree. This dual degree program allows students to receive, after three years of study, both the JD and the Master of Laws degrees. The Master of Laws is a French national law degree that entitles students to sit for the French Bar exam. Students in the JD/Master program spend two years at Duke and a third year studying in Paris.

Fordham University	Fordham Law School offers six international double degree programs. In three years, you can earn your JD from Fordham and a master's degree from: Fudan Law School; Université Paris I and Paris II; Université de Versailles; Universidad de Pontificia Comillas de Madrid; and Luis Guido Carli, Rome.
Georgetown University Law Center	A year-long Master's program has been created in Paris through a joint effort by two of France's most highly regarded universities —Institut d'Etudes Politiques de Paris (Sciences Po) and l'Université Paris I Pantheon-Sorbonne Law School (Sorbonne). In addition to the Master of Laws, a French national law degree, Georgetown students receive a total of 14 Georgetown credits toward their JD degree. This program requires that the students take an additional semester at Georgetown (though without any additional tuition requirement).
Harvard University	University of Cambridge J.D./LL.M.
Indiana University Maurer School of Law	Students can earn a joint JD/LLM in information law and policy from University of Oxford, a joint JD/MBA with Sunkyunkwan University, Seoul, an LLM from Trinity College Dublin School of Law or an LLB from Jindal Global Law School, New Delhi.
University of Houston	The UH Law Center and The University of Calgary offer an International Energy Lawyers Program which allows students to earn both American and Canadian law degrees in four years. Students will spend two years at each school and take courses that will enable them to apply for admission to bars in the United States and Canada.
Michigan State University	Dual Degree Program with the University of Ottawa Faculty of Law.
Northeastern University School of Law	In appropriate circumstances, Northeastern University School of Law has arranged opportunities for students to spend one year abroad in an approved foreign law school program during their second or third year and obtain up to a full year of credit toward their Northeastern University School of Law JD and an LLM degree from the foreign law school.
Northwestern University	Northwestern University participates in a dual degree program with France.
Nova Southeastern University	Nova Southeastern University participates in dual degree programs in Spain (Barcelona), Czech Republic (Prague), and Italy (Rome).
University of Pennsylvania	JD/LLM with the University of Hong Kong. JD/Masters in Economic Law with Sciences Po. Students spend the entirety of their third year of Law School overseas meeting the requirements for these dual degree programs.
Saint Louis University School of Law	Saint Louis University School of Law participates in a program in France which leads to the French law degree.
Stetson University	JD/Grado Program Dual Degree in Spain and the U.S.
SUNY Buffalo Law School	In cooperation with the Catholic University of Lyon (Université Catholique de Lyon), SUNY Buffalo Law School provides the opportunity to earn two separate LL.M. degrees in a single academic year. http://www.law.buffalo.edu/academics/lyon.html
University of Texas	The University of Texas offers a dual-degree program with the Instituto Tecnológico Autónomo de Mexico (ITAM) in Mexico City
Washington University School of Law	Transnational Law Program offers joint JD/LLM programs with Utrecht University in The Netherlands; Queen's University Belfast; University of Trento in Italy; Catholic University of Portugal; University of Queensland (TC Beirne School of Law) in Australia; L'Université Paris I Panthéon Sorbonne in France.

CLINICAL PROGRAMS

This section of the Book of Law School Lists attempts to give a listing of areas in which clinical programs are offered. Given the great variety of clinical programs and the even greater variety of titles given to these programs, we believe that it is more useful to simply identify areas. Often these clinical programs assume the form of internships or externships. Specific details about each program can be found in individual law school bulletins or in the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, where there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Wilson/Stern survey.

Second, the list concludes with a category simply called "Various." Resisting the temptation to label it "Miscellaneous," the editors listed schools which indicate that they have clinical programs but did not offer specific information. In many of these cases, clinical programs are arranged individually according to the needs of the student and the opportunities available. Students and advisors should examine information provided individually by these schools.

Pro Bono Work Requirement/Public Service Requirement

Albany Law School students must satisfy the 50-hour requirement for law-related pro bono work. Pro bono activity is robust at Albany Law and programs include animal law, human trafficking, prisoner rights, child advocacy, civil rights, elder law, LGBT rights, and many more.

Appalachian School of Law: The Externship requirement (three credit hours) allows students to apply the skills learned in the core curriculum. Students typically take this course during the summer following their first year of studies at the Law School. Students work for a total of approximately 225 unpaid hours in a judges' chambers, public law office, or public interest organization under the direct supervision of a licensed attorney.

Boston University School of Law encourages students to join the Pro Bono Program, which gives students the opportunity to dedicate their developing legal skills to unmet legal needs in the Boston area, throughout the United States and around the world. Through the Pro Bono Program, J.D. student provide 50 hours of law-related service during their three years at BU Law (LL.M. students provide 12 hours) to organizations dedicated to underrepresented groups and or social issues. Upon completion, students receive a notation on their law school transcripts confirming participation in the program.

University of California—Davis
The Pro Bono Program

This is a certificate program designed to enhance our educational process. Pro bono work is volunteer legal work performed without compensation or academic credit and under the supervision of an attorney. Students can volunteer in public interest organizations, government agencies or courts.

Participation in the program also provides students recognition for their community service; upon completion of 50 or more hours of pro bono work, students receive a Pro Bono Program certificate.

Public Service Law Program

The Public Service Law Program is an academic certification program developed for students seeking public service careers. Students are eligible to enroll at any time throughout law school but are encouraged to enroll in soon after registering for an approved course or obtaining a qualifying position. Certificate requirements include academic and experiential components. To receive a certificate, students must fulfill the academic and experiential components of the program.

University of California—Irvine

The University of California, Irvine School of Law is deeply committed to the performance of public service work. We expect that our students and faculty will be regularly engaged in public service work throughout their careers.

Public service work, of course, can take many forms and reflect many values, including activities such as helping those who cannot afford legal services and working for public interest and government organizations. We encourage our students and faculty to set yearly public service goals similar to those expected of practicing attorneys.

Case Western Reserve University

Encourages all law students to participate in pro bono work and recognizes those who complete a minimum of 50 qualifying pro bono hours by April 1 of their 3L year. To qualify, Pro Bono Work must be (1) law related; (2) supervised or approved by an attorney; (3) provided to the client free of charge or at a substantially reduced rate; (4) uncompensated and not for credit; and (5) provided to underrepresented persons, interest, or communities on behalf of a not-profit or government organization. Recognition will include a certificate signed by the Dean; an annual recognition event for graduating students who have satisfied the pro bono hours minimum requirement; and, recognition in the Commencement program. The graduating student(s) who complete the greatest number of qualifying pro bono hours will receive the Pro Bono Graduating Student of the Year Award and recognition at the Commencement ceremony.

Catholic University of America

The Columbus School of Law encourages students to engage in pro bono work through the CUA Law Pro Bono Challenge. CSL students pledge to complete 2550, or 75+ hours of pro bono service during their law school tenure and are recognized accordingly at an annual reception and upon graduation.

Charleston School of Law

Regardless of a student's path after graduation, part of the Charleston School of Law's mission is to instill in students the value of public service. Students at the Charleston School of Law are required to perform 30 hours of pro bono work under the supervision of a licensed attorney before graduation. Generally students will receive pro bono credit when a student performs law related work without pay or academic credit for a public interest attorney or for a private attorney when he or she has taken a case on a pro bono or appointed basis. A public interest attorney is an attorney employed by an organization that is educational, charitable, governmental or nonprofit in nature. The school also requires its faculty to provide 30 hours of pro bono work every three years.

University of Colorado

University of Colorado encourages pro bono activities by a voluntary Public Service Pledge program. Students who complete 50 hours of law-related public service work in law school will be recognized at graduation and work will be reflected on transcript.

Columbia University: Every candidate for a J.D. degree must devote 40 hours to public interest field work between the start of the second year of law school and the end of the third year as a prerequisite for graduation. Work will qualify if it is uncompensated (financially or by academic credit), public interest or public service law-related work, broadly defined and regardless of political orientation.

Cornell University

The Public Interest Law Union and the Office of Public Service can help you start building your commitment to pro bono service during law school. The purpose of the Public Service Challenge is to provide school-wide recognition of Cornell Law Students who devote time to public service activities. Students who participate in the Public Service Challenge will receive a Certificate from Dean Stewart Schwab upon each level of completion.

University of Denver

Public Interest

50 hours during law school tenure

University of District of Columbia School of Law

Through Duke University's Pro Bono Project, students provide volunteer legal services in individual areas of interest. While not required, participation is strongly encouraged.

Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University: Every student must complete at least 50 hours of pro bono service prior to graduation. Students who provide 75+ hours of pro bono service receive recognition at graduation.

Florida State does have a pro bono requirement. Students must fulfill 20 hours of pro bono/public service work during the second or third year of law school.

Georgetown University Law Center encourages students to participate in pro bono activities through the Pro Bono Challenge. Students who perform at least 75 hours of law-related pro bono work during their years at Georgetown are recognized at Graduation.

Georgia State University To encourage and support students who provide pro bono services to the community, the College of Law has adopted the Georgia State University College of Law Pro Bono Recognition Program. Pro bono activities include not only those that ensure adequate legal services for moderate and low income individuals but efforts that enhance the capacity of law and legal institutions to do justice, and activities in the local community that promote justice. The College of Law's pro bono recognition program is designed to encourage students to engage in such activities while in law school and thus conduct themselves in accordance with highest values and standards of the legal profession.

Hamline University School of Law has a pro bono service requirement of 24 hours over the course of law school.

Harvard University has a pro bono requirement of 50 hours over the course of law school. On average, students complete approximately 600 hours of pro bono work before they graduate.

The University of Hawaii | William S. Richardson School of Law Except for transfer students, law students who enroll in the William S. Richardson School of Law must complete 60 hours of law-related pro bono legal service, including law-related public service activities, as a graduation requirement. Transfer students must complete a total of 10 hours of pro bono legal service, including law-related service activities, for every semester enrolled in the William S. Richardson School of Law.

The Maurice A. Deane School of Law—Hofstra University offers students opportunities to engage in pro bono service on a not-for-credit basis. The Public Service Certificate Program provides students the opportunity to volunteer with nonprofit organizations, governmental agencies and private law firms, or practitioners doing pro bono work. Students who participate receive a certificate from Hofstra Law recognizing their public service. The student-run Unemployment Action Center is a nonprofit corporation that offers free advice and representation to persons denied unemployment benefits.

The University of Idaho College of Law is committed to providing opportunities for law students that emphasize the value and habit of service to the community. Accordingly, all students are required to perform 40 hours of uncompensated law-related pro bono service as a condition of graduation. The purpose of this pro bono requirement is to instill in students a commitment to their responsibility as lawyers to give back to the community and promote justice by assisting the underserved and underrepresented. As a result of the program, students gain practical legal experience, clients are served, and legal service providers gain valuable assistance. Students are given the opportunity to fulfill their public service requirements in a wide range of settings, including legal service organizations, government agencies, private firms (pro bono cases), non-profits, and legislative offices.

The Pro Bono Project at Indiana University Maurer School of Law is a cooperative program between the Law School and the bar and bench of the surrounding area to provide civil legal assistance to people who could not otherwise afford it. Students are assigned to work closely with volunteer lawyer on a wide variety of matters. The school has established an aspirational goal of 60 hours of pro bono service for students during their time in law school.

Indiana University McKinney School of Law encourages students to take part in our Pro Bono Program, where you'll gain valuable hands-on experience while helping some of society's most underrepresented populations. Students who complete at least 50 hours of pro bono work during the course of their law school career will receive a Pro Bono notation on their transcript, receive a certificate, and participate in a recognition reception at the conclusion in each academic year that you contribute 50 or more hours to the program.

Liberty University School of Law: Liberty University School of Law has a long tradition of expecting and encouraging community service from its students in keeping with its mission "to affirm the Christian worldview and provide a practical expression of God's love for mankind." The law school does not mandate volunteerism; however, it is working to develop a culture of service among the law students, faculty, staff, and administration.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles mandates 40 hours public service work beginning entering class of Fall 94 and thereafter.

The University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement. After completion of their first year and before their final semester of law school, students must perform a minimum of 30 hours of uncompensated public service work. Institutional support is provided in the form of a half-time director and a half-time assistant who help students in meeting this requirement by having over 300 locations identified as well as assisting students in establishing other locations according to their individual interest.

University of Maine School of Law's faculty has adopted a voluntary student pro bono legal service standard under which every student is encouraged to provide a minimum of 80 hours of pro bono legal service prior to the time of graduation.

"Pro bono legal service" is defined as work involving the provision of legal services that is performed without either financial compensation or academic credit.

Examples include such work for legal services providers, individual lawyers providing pro bono service, social service agencies, low income organizations, civil rights organizations, environmental organizations, consumer organizations, and governmental agencies providing service to individual members of the public who are disadvantaged. Partisan political activity is not included in the definition of "pro bono legal services." Students achieving 80 hours are recognized at graduation.

University of Maryland requires full-time day students to complete a public service requirement by taking one of a number of credit bearing courses in which students have substantial responsibility for providing legal assistance to poor persons or organizations representing the interest of poor persons. These courses:

- a) provide students with an experience (including direct professional contact with poor persons) on how the law operates in practice; and
- b) include regular classes in which the faculty member provides instruction that, when integrated with the practice experience, will help the students to understand, apply and critique theory and practice; and
- c) have a professional responsibility component.

University of Memphis Law School is committed to instill within its students the very heart of the legal profession — providing equal justice under the law. Because equal justice comes at a cost, lawyers have a unique and rewarding obligation to provide pro bono services to those unable to pay. Memphis Law's Pro Bono Program is designed to nurture this ethical obligation and provide students with the opportunity to gain a practical, hands-on experience while helping improve the lives of the under-represented. Students are required to complete 40 hours of pro bono work in order to graduate.

University of Michigan Law School asks students to voluntarily commit to performing 50 hours of pro bono service while enrolled at Michigan Law, allowing students to connect their developing knowledge to the world outside the Law School and gaining valuable legal skills while helping an organization in our community meet the needs of underrepresented individuals. Students may choose from Law School-organized projects (ranging from those that provide legal assistance to local residents to projects that spotlight events across the nation and around the globe), or may organize their own projects. Graduating students performing at least 50 hours of pro bono work will receive a Certificate of Pro Bono Service from the Dean, recognition at an annual pro bono banquet, and acknowledgment during the Honors Convocation.

University of Nebraska seeks to encourage and recognize volunteer legal service by second and third year students through the Pro Bono Initiative. Students completing 40 hours or more of approved, qualified pro bono work during their second and/or third years will receive a Dean's certificate upon graduation.

University of Nevada, Las Vegas—William S. Boyd School of Law requires first-year students to participate in a community service program in which teams of students, working with Legal Aid Center of Southern Nevada prepare and conduct weekly workshops for unrepresented people on basic procedures in family or small claims court and on basic landlord/tenant law and bankruptcy law.

New York Law School: Applicants seeking to be admitted to the New York State bar on or after January 1, 2015 will need to demonstrate that they have completed 50 hours of qualifying pro bono work prior to submitting their applications for admission.

University of North Carolina: The Pro Bono Program tracks the number of hours completed by each law student in order to recognize outstanding pro bono service. Students completing fifty or more hours of pro bono service receive a letter from the Director of the Pro Bono Program and the Dean of the law school acknowledging the contribution they have made to our community. Those who do more than seventy-five hours of pro bono service while a law student are recognized by the North Carolina Bar Association at the public service reception held at the end of each school year in the law school Rotunda. Furthermore, students who complete one hundred or more hours of pro bono service are individually acknowledged at law school graduation. Students completing 50 or more hours during their law school career will receive special notations on their official transcripts. .

Northeastern University School of Law At Northeastern University School of Law, we fuse theory and practice with ethical and social justice ideals so students understand what lawyers do, how they should do it, and the difference they can make in the lives of others. Therefore, all students must fulfill a public interest graduation requirement. Under this rule, public interest is defined as employment or service with a government agency; a legal aid, legal services, public defender, victim advocate or similar agency; an organization or attorney advocating law reform or performing pro bono legal representation; or any placement where the dominant characteristic is service to underrepresented groups. Judicial internships are not included in this definition and private firms operated for profit are only included under the 30 hour pro bono option. The requirement may be fulfilled in any of the following ways: completion of a public interest clinical course; completion of a public interest co-op; 30 hours of uncompensated legal work in a public interest setting or a public interest pro bono project with a private firm during the second semester of the first year, second and/or third year of law school; or completion of an independent study project of at least 3 credit hours.

Northern Kentucky University Chase College of Law requires all students to complete 50 hours of pro bono service during their law school tenure. Students may satisfy the hourly requirement at one placement site, or may satisfy the requirement with several different projects involving fewer than 50 hours, so long as they ultimately complete a total of 50 hours of pro bono service. Fifty (50) hours is a minimum requirement; students are encouraged to perform additional hours if they so choose .

Northwestern University. We expect all students to complete at least 40 hours of community service work during their J.D. degrees.

The Nova Southeastern University College of Law Pro Bono Honor Program recognizes students who work pro bono for the public interest while enrolled in law school. Students completing a certain number of service hours will be awarded this graduation honor. The program is part of the Public Interest Law Center, which provides information and resources to students interested in working for the public interest and acknowledges that work.

The University of Pennsylvania Law School requires all students entering the J.D. Program to perform 70 hours of unpaid public service work over the course of their J.D. Program through the Toll Public Interest Center.

Roger Williams University School of Law—requires all students to complete 50 hours of law-related public service over the course of their J.D. Program.

Rutgers Law School: The Pro Bono Program places students in a wide variety of public interest or public service law offices where students perform a minimum of 35 hours of service. The program is voluntary.

Saint Louis University School of Law does not have a pro bono or public service requirement, however, students are strongly encouraged to participate in pro bono legal service prior to graduation. Pro bono work may be on behalf of a government agency, a non-profit organization or indigent individuals.

University of St. Thomas School of Law (MN): As a requirement for graduation, all students must complete fifty hours of public service during their three years of law school.

St. Thomas University requires its law students complete a minimum of 50 hours of pro bono work as a requirement for graduation. It is designed to give second and third year students legal experience under the supervision of lawyers in a variety of non-profit offices, government agencies, and law firms.

Santa Clara University: Students seeking to earn the Public Interest Law Certificate must complete 50 hours of community volunteer work promoting public interest and social justice.

Seattle University School of Law invites all law students to pledge to complete at least 100 hours for full-time students or 50 hours for part-time students of legal pro bono and community volunteer work before they graduate.

University of South Carolina: Through the University of South Carolina's Pro Bono Program, students provide volunteer legal services to a variety of projects and areas of interests. Participation is not required, but strongly encouraged and opportunities for service are readily available.

South Texas College of Law: The College's Pro Bono Honors Program seeks to encourage professionalism both by providing pro bono public service opportunities for students and by recognizing this service through a formal certificate program. Students enrolled in this voluntary certificate program must perform at least 50 service hours at a pre-approved placement or seek approval for an alternative placement from the program director.

SMU Dedman School of Law requires all students entering the J.D. Program in the Fall of 1993 or thereafter to complete 30 hours of work in approved law-related public service placements.

Stetson University College of Law: As a requirement for graduation, each student must complete 60 hours of public service.

Syracuse University College of Law Recognition for Pro Bono and Community Service: In recognition of the commitment to pro bono and community service work by students of the Syracuse University College of Law, the following recognition program has been created. Students who are in good academic standing and have completed at least 30 hours of pro bono and community service will receive special recognition at graduation. There are two categories of Pro Bono and Community Service Recognition Awards.

Blue Pro Bono Community Service Award: (complete the recommended 30 hours of service) Orange Pro Bono and Community Service Award: (exceed the recommended 30 hours of service by at least 1 full our)

In addition, the top three graduating students providing the most pro bono and community service hours shall be individually recognized.

Texas A&M University School of Law: Each student must perform no less than thirty hours of pro bono work through a placement that has been pre-approved by the School of Law. The pro bono work may be commenced following the completion of the first year of law school, and must be completed prior to graduation. The student is responsible for selecting a placement, contacting that office, arranging to do the work, completing the work, and filling out all proper forms. The work must be law related; clerical work is appropriate only to the extent needed to carry out the overall legal task. The work must be uncompensated; students may not receive monetary compensation, academic credit, or other tangible benefits for performing the service. The work must be supervised by an attorney.

Touro Law Center: As a condition of graduation, every student must satisfy the Public Interest Law Perspective Requirement by successful completion of certain clinical programs or classroom courses or by certification of 40 hours of pro bono work.

Tulane Law School was the first in the country to institute a mandatory pro bono or a community service program. Since 1987, Tulane has required each graduating student to have performed 20 hours of supervised, uncompensated legal work for clients who could not otherwise afford assistance. In 2006 requirement was increased to 30 hours.

Valparaiso University School of Law adopted a pro bono requirement in 1988. Valparaiso law students must perform 40 hours of pro bono work supervised by an attorney. Students must complete the work after completion of 30 credit hours and prior to graduation. If 60 hours or more are completed, it will be noted on the student's transcript.

University of Washington requires each student to complete 60 hours of public service legal work.

Washburn University School of Law: Some Washburn University School of Law Certificate programs include a public service component.

Washington University School of Law: Students are encouraged to participate in a Pro Bono Pledge and fulfill 50 hours of pro bono work before graduation. Our Public Service Advisory Board helps individual find service projects that are tailored to their interests. We have long-standing institutional connections with many organizations throughout the larger St. Louis community and beyond.

Western State College of Law has a voluntary Public Service Program in which students use their legal skills to perform law-related work for the community and the underprivileged and are recognized for that work upon completing 40 hrs. of service.

Widener University Commonwealth Law School: Provides a special recognition at graduation for law students who perform a minimum of 60 hours of pro bono work over the course of their J.D. career.

Widener University Delaware Law School provides a special recognition at graduation for law students who perform a minimum of sixty hours of pro bono work over the course of the JD career.

Willamette University College of Law: Willamette's voluntary pro bono Honors Program enables student to enhance their learning experience by participating in community-based legal service projects. Students gain valuable hands-on involvement in the community by volunteering with a government agency or with a public interest or nonprofit organization. All Willamette law students are eligible to participate and receive pro bono Honors credit.

William Mitchell College of Law: Provides a wide variety of volunteer options through the Minnesota Justice Foundations. Students who serve 50 or more hours through MJF or clinics receive a transcript certification.

LAW SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS OPEN TO STUDENT PARTICIPATION

This section of the Book of Law School Lists contains a summary of specialized law school publications open for student participation.

In addition to the scholarly specialized publications listed in the next few pages, many law schools publish newspapers, newsletters and yearbooks. In most cases these are entirely student run.

Further information about these publications can be obtained by examining the individual school's website and/or the school's most recent bulletin or by consulting the ABA · LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools. Where designated by an asterisk (*), the information came from the Official Guide rather than a response to the Wilson/Stern survey.

3. Angela D. Dales Merit Scholarship Program for first-year students:

- Merit Scholarships are awarded in the form of a credit against the tuition charged to the student who receives the award.
- Eligibility for an award during the student's first year of Law School is determined based on the student's Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) score and undergraduate grade point average (UGPA) as determined by LSAC. Eligibility for retention of an award during the student's second and third years is determined based on the student's academic performance during Law School.
- The Law School is able to award only a limited number of these scholarships, and scholarships will be awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. Applicants therefore are encouraged to complete their Law School application at the earliest possible date. An award is not finalized until the applicant has been accepted to the Law School and has paid his or her seat deposit.
- Transfer students are not eligible for Merit Scholarships.

Temple University Beasley School of Law

1. Non-need Based Scholarships for Entering Students:

Temple awards a number of scholarships based on merit, need and a combination of both, so it is difficult to separate the factors which go into the selection process and to provide specific information on the number of awards made in a specific academic year.

Incoming students are eligible for a number of merit and need scholarships ranging from partial to full-time tuition. The faculty Admissions Committee makes recommendations for merit scholarship awards and students are not required to submit a separate application. The one exception is the Rubin-Public Interest Scholars Program which provides full and half tuition scholarships to students who will be pursuing a public interest legal career.

Using division students are considered for numerous scholarships based on a variety of factors including academic performance, financial need and contributions to the law community.

1. Need Based Scholarships (other than government funds)

Temple awards a number of scholarships based on merit, need and a combination of both, so its difficult to separate the factors which go into the selection process and to provide specific information on the number of rewards made in a specific academic year.

Incoming students are eligible for a number of merit and need scholarships ranging from partial to full-time tuition. The faculty Admissions Committee makes recommendations for merit scholarship awards and student are not required to submit a separate application. The one exception is the Rubin-Public Interest Scholars Program which provides full and half tuition scholarships to student who will be pursuing a public interest legal career.

Upper division students are considered for numerous scholarships based on a variety of factors including academic performance, financial need and contributions to the law school community.

Need based scholarship are warded to students who demonstrate significant financial need as determined by the Law School Financial Aid Office based on the information they supply on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid.

B. SCHOOLS OFFERING A SUMMER CONDITIONAL ADMISSION PROGRAM

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

Atlanta's John Marshall Law School

Access to Law School Opportunity Program (ALSO): ALSO is designed to allow participants to demonstrate that their performance in college, the LSAT or both do not reflect their capability to succeed in law school. An applicant's performance in the program will be considered with the balance of his or her application for the purpose of making an admission decision.

Campbell Law School

Approximately 50–75 students are given the opportunity to participate in our seven week performance-based admission program (P BAP). The students take two courses of three credit hours each. A final exam is given in each course. A student who receives a "B" in both courses is automatically admitted to the fall program. Students who do not meet this criteria, but who demonstrate potential for success in law school, will be placed on a waiting list for the fall program.

Charleston School of Law

The Conditional Admission Program (CAP) is a performance-based admission program. Students are required to take two law school courses in order to provide the most accurate indication of a student's potential for law school success. CAP is a three week program. Both classes are online and each meets for two hours a day, Monday – Friday. Participants in CAP are admitted to the next entering J.D. class if they earn a minimum of a "C" in each course and have a minimum cumulative GPA of 2.50. For more information, visit CharlestonLaw.edu/CAP.

University of Detroit Mercy

An 8 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Legal Writing and Criminal Law. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 20 students generally participate. The Special Summer Program (SSP) is operated for minority, disadvantaged, or disabled applicants who do not meet the minimum standards of the entering class, but show potential for the study of law. SSP applicants must have at least one LSAT score in the 15th percentile. Question 13 of the application asks the applicant if he/she would like to be considered for the SSP. In a separate statement, applicants must describe the circumstances that qualify him/her for the SSP. In case of a disability, the applicant is requested to provide documentation. To be eligible for matriculation in the fall, students of the program must pass the substantive criminal law course, pass the legal research and writing course, and receive the unanimous evaluation of the SSP faculty. The cost of the program is $500 for tuition and $18 for parking. The contact person for the program is Kimberly Jones, Director of Admissions, joneski@udmercy.edu.

University of the District of Columbia

A 3 week summer conditional admission program. Required classes are Legal Writing, Reasoning and Analysis (class and tutorials); Torts and Criminal Law or Contracts. Students do not receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 8 to 16 students participate. Criteria for admission into the program varies, usually the LSAT and/or GPA are below the "accepted" numerical standards or the student's writing or organizational skills may be of concern and below what is deemed acceptable. There is no special application procedure. The student must attend every class and complete every assignment and exam in order to meet the condition of his or her admission into the fall class. At the end of the program each student is provided with an evaluation of his or her performance in the program; they are also counseled about their progress and about areas in which they may need to improve. If appropriate the program director recommends that students participate in the Academic Support Program. There is no cost to the student for participating in the program. The contact person for the program is Associate Dean Laurie Morin, Academic Affairs; she can be reached at lmorin@udc.edu.

Florida Coastal School of Law

The Alternative Admission Model Program for Legal Education (AAMPLE®) is a performance-based admissions program that rewards students who demonstrate the desire, commitment, and level of achievement necessary to manage the rigors of law school. Students are required to take two law school courses selected from our regular law school curriculum and modified to provide the most accurate indication of a student's potential for law school success. Students may choose to take the courses on-campus or online. Within each course, students will take two quizzes and a final exam. Students who successfully pass each course with a 2.5 G.P.A. or higher are automatically accepted into the school's Juris Doctor program. Florida Coastal offers the AAMPLE program twice a year- once in the summer for admission to our fall class and once in the fall for admission to our spring class. For more information, please contact Nicole Schumer, Assistant Director of Admissions, at nschumer@fcsl.edu.

Indiana University
McKinney School of Law

McKinney School of Law participates in the Indiana Conference of Legal Education Opportunity (ICLEO). ICLEO is a state based program that helps minority, low income, or educationally disadvantaged college graduates pursue a law degree and a career in the Indiana legal community. The students selected participate in the 6 week ICLEO Summer Institute. The housing and course materials are provided and there is no tuition to participate. Students who successfully complete the program are certified as ICLEO Fellows and receive an annual stipend of $6,500 (public) or $9,000 (private) for up to 3 years. There is a separate application and selection process. For more information, please visit mckinneylaw.edu/admissions/jd/diversity.html.

Louisiana State University

Legal Methods course, successful completion, admission for Fall. Must have approval of Faculty Committee to enter summer program.

University of Louisville—
Brandeis School of Law

Approximately 15 applicants given the opportunity to participate in a six-week course (Monday through Friday) designed to enhance their skills in order to improve their chances for success in law school. All who complete the work in a satisfactory (effort and performance are evaluated) manner are allowed to enter law school in the fall. Most, if not all, of the participants successfully matriculate each fall.

Loyola—New OrleansUniversity of Memphis

To help achieve diversity in the classroom, during the summer the University of Memphis School of Law operates the Tennessee Institute for Pre-Law (TIP) program. The TIP program is for Tennessee residents (and Border County residents) who are not admitted through the regular admissions process, but who show potential for the study of law and bring diversity to the class. Applicants who are admitted into TIP and successfully complete the summer program will be eligible for admission in the fall semester to the University of Memphis School of Law. The TIP portion of the application requests information on whether a student is a first-generation college graduate, foreign-born, or a first-generation U.S. citizen; whether a student is a graduate of a historically minority undergraduate institution; whether a student has a disability; or whether a student is or was economically disadvantaged. The required TIP supplemental statement asks the student to describe the circumstances that qualify the student for participation in the program and the way in which the student might contribute to diversity in the law school.

New York Law School

New York Law School offers an online 6-week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes: Fourth Amendment and Negotiable Instruments. Students do receive credit for the classes. Twenty seats are reserved in the program for those seeking admission to New York Law School. The admissions committee invites selected students to participate in the program. There is no special application procedure. In order for the student to matriculate into law school in the fall, the criteria are: 1) satisfactory participation, (2) no grade below a C in either class, and (3) a cumulative GPA of 2.5. This year, the program cost was $3500, but this figure is subject to change in the future. The contact person for the program is Ella Mae Estrada, Assistant Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid, ellamae.estrada@nyls.edu, 212.431.2888.

North Carolina Central University School of Law

Students selected to participate in the Performance-Based Admission Program (PBAP) spend two weeks in a classroom setting where they are given instruction in one substantive law course by experienced faculty members. Additionally, students learn basic skills: how to prepare for class; how to organize and outline course material; and how to answer legal questions. Applicants are evaluated through diagnostic testing, oral and written assignments and interviews. These evaluations determine whether the PBAP applicant will be admitted to the School of Law in the fall.

Nova Southeastern University

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Introduction to the 4th Amendment and Negotiable Instruments. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 100 students participate, subject to change yearly. The admissions committee invites selected applicants to participate in the program. There is no special application procedure. In order for a student to matriculate into law school in the fall, the criteria is no grade below a C in either class and a GPA of 2.5. The cost of the program is $1500. Please contact HYPERLINK "mailto:AAMPLE@nova.edu" AAMPLE@nova.edu or 954-262-6119 for more information.

University of Oklahoma

The 1LS (First-year Law Summer Start) Program is a summer program for a select group of admitted students that runs from late May to mid-July. The focus of the 1LS Program is to give a first look at law school and provide the opportunity to earn law school credits during the summer. Students will take a course typically offered in the fall of their first year of law school, and a Legal Methods class. Students participating in the 1LS Program benefit from the opportunity to begin law school early and lighten their course and final exam loads for the Fall semester.

Oklahoma City University

Two pass/fail courses.

Saint John's University

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class which varies from summer to summer. The class is always a first-year required course, last year it was Property, the year before it was Contracts. Students receive credit for the class, if they successfully complete the program by earning a B minus or better. Approximately 30 students participate each summer. Applicants need to request consideration for the Summer Institute no later than March 30th. Alternatively, an applicant may be invited to the program if their application is not otherwise admissible. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must earn a B minus or better in the course. The student pays only the cost of books. There is a required $750 deposit (the same as for all admits). If the student successfully completes the program this deposit is credited towards tuition, if not, the $750 is refunded to them. For more information contact either Robert M. Harrison, Assistant Dean for Admissions, harrisor@stjohns.edu, or Theresa McNerney, mcnernt1@stjohns.edu.

Saint Louis University

The Summer Institute at Saint Louis University is designed to identify students who have experienced the effects of educational disadvantage. The Institute includes a substantive first semester course and a course in legal skills. The program lasts seven weeks, beginning in late May/early June and ending in mid-July. Students who successfully complete this program are accepted into the School of Law for the Fall semester. Limited to 25 students. Tuition and books are free.

St. Mary's University

A 5 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Logic & Writing and Analytical Skills. Between 15–20 students participate in the program. They are recommended by the Admissions Committee from the general applicant pool, and selected by the Program Director. There is no special application procedure. In order to matriculate into law school in the fall, the student must be recommended for admission by the professors conducting the summer program after completion. The cost of the program is $2,000 for day students and $1,500 for evening students, subject to change.

St. Thomas University School of Law

Admitted students have the option, or are required to enroll in a two week course prior to entering their 1L year. Introduction to Legal Studies (ILS) gives students the opportunity to experience how a law school classroom is conducted, while also introducing them to the format and setting of the law school exam.

Seattle University School of Law

Seattle University School of Law: 7 week required attendance in the Access Admission Program. All students are considered full members of the entering class and guaranteed admission in fall

University of South Dakota

A 6 week screening program which will yield 10 admits. Between 30–50 students participate in the program. Students are required to take two classes, Agency and Personal Property. Students are selected based on a completed file that is eligible to begin law school that fall; usually the only concern is in the numbers, either a low LSAT and/or GPA. Applicants cannot apply for the program; they are invited to participate after review of the law school application and supporting material. During the final week of the program, participants take an exam in each course, anonymously. The two exam scores are averaged, and those who have a minimum grade of 70 (mid-C) on EACH exam, AND whose scores rank in the top ten of the program are offered admission. The cost of the program is $1,000 plus books, and room & board. The contact person for the program is Jean Henriques, Admissions Officer, jhenriqu@usd.edu.

Syracuse University

A 3 week, summer program called Legal Education Opportunity Program (LEO) that is not a conditional admission program, but a program that provides an opportunity for students who may not have otherwise been offered admission. Students are required to take three classes, Introduction to Law and the Legal System, Legal Writing Workshop, and Legal Skills. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Between 20–30 students usually participate in the LEO program. Recognizing that numerical indicators are not always the best predictors of success in law school—even when considered in combination with other factors—the College of Law admits a limited number of students each year through the LEO program. There is no special application procedure. Students do not need to achieve set grades during this program, but need to successfully complete the program requirements and take an exam at the end of the three weeks. Tuition costs are covered for all LEO participants during the summer program. For more information, contact Melanie Rodriguez, Assoc. Director of Career Services, mcrodriguez@law.syr.edu

Texas Southern University

Special attention to non-quantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.

Texas Tech University

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required courses change from year to year. Students receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 20–25 students participate in the program. The Admissions Committee decides which students will be considered for this program and those that will be accepted for the program. It is designed for those with lower academic indicators, but additional information in the file indicates the ability to succeed in law school. There is no special application procedure. If accepted for the summer program, they must attend the summer program to proceed to the fall. There is no required grade point average from the summer to proceed to the fall. The current tuition rate is $334 for Texas residents and $580 for non-residents. Students will pay the current tuition rate and all tuition generated fees. Since these rates change from year to year, the applicant should check the university website for current information. The contact person for the program is Terence L. Cook, Assistant Dean for Admissions and Recruitment, terence.cook@ttu.edu.

Thomas M. Cooley Law School

The Professional Exploration Program (PEP) is a 5–8 day intensive program. This program is designed to give law school applicants who do not meet the minimum admissions requirements a chance to qualify for alternative admission. It also provides law school applicants the opportunity for self-exploration and discovery of strengths and weaknesses in their pursuit of a career. At the completion of the program, the students' performance is evaluated by the PEP Committee. Students are notified by letter, three weeks after the program, as to the committee's decision whether they've been offered admission to Thomas M. Cooley Law School.

University of Tulsa College of Law

All admitted first year law students have the option to begin law school in the summer. This program is not conditional.

Widener University
Delaware Law School

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes. Student participation varies from year to year. Criteria for admission is based on applicants who have displayed promise of success in legal studies even though they may have excelled in only one of the two principal standardized predictors of success—the Law School Admission Test and the undergraduate grade point average. The personal statement, letters of recommendation and all materials submitted in support of the application are considered. There is no special application procedure. Participants who obtain a 2.3 cumulative grade point average in the program are offered admission to the fall class. The cost of the program is $1000. Successful program participants receive a $5,000 renewable tuition scholarship upon their fall enrollment.

C. SCHOOLS OFFERING ONE YEAR DEFERRALS FOR ACCEPTED STUDENTS

Only schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

Unless otherwise noted requests for deferrals are considered on an individual basis.

E. SCHOOLS PERMITTING PRE-SELECTION OF STUDENTS TO BE INTERVIEWED BY FIRMS

Schools listed below unless otherwise noted, permit firms interviewing on campus to pre-select 100% of the candidates they will interview. Only schools responding to the Wilson/Stern survey were included.

University of Alabama	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers pre-select candidates.
Albany Law School	On campus interviews are scheduled based on 100% employer prescreening.
American University
University of Arizona	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.
Arizona State University College of Law	May pre-select 100%.
University of Arkansas— Little Rock
Atlanta’s John Marshall Law School
Baylor University
Boston College Law School	While employers may pre-select all candidates, they are strongly encouraged to participate in an interview lottery system to ensure that all interested students have a broad range of interviewing opportunities. Over 90% of employers participate in our lottery system.
Boston University School of Law	All students are permitted to submit to all employers. Employers preselect 100% of candidates for interviews.
Brooklyn Law School	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. While employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of the candidates, they are strongly encouraged to reserve interview slots for students ranked below their stated criteria so that a larger number of interested students have interviewing opportunities.
University of California—Davis
California Western University
Capital University
Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)	Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.
Case Western Reserve University	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.

University of Connecticut	Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.
Creighton University	Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.
University of Denver
DePaul University College of Law	Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.
Drake University	Drake University does not permit firms to preselect 100% of the interview candidates unless this is the only way a firm will come. If this is the case, we allow them to do it, with notice to the students.
Duke University	Students rank the firms they are interested in interviewing with and the Office of Career and Professional Development arranges a schedule that accommodates as many of those requests as possible. Firms do not pre-select the students they interview with.
Duquesne University	Interviewed by firms. Employers are asked to select 75% of the interviews, 25% are selected through the lottery system.
Emory University
Florida Coastal School of Law	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. FCSL does permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms based on criteria by the employer.
Florida International University	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates whom they will interview.
University of Florida	Employers may pre-select candidates. Criteria include experience, extra curricular activities, grades, evidence of research and writing skills, and ties to geographic region.
George Mason University	School permitting pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.
Georgia State University	Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates
University of Georgia	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.
Gonzaga University	Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.
Hamline University School of Law	All resumes are sent to employers, although they may pre-select.
Maurice A. Deane School of Law —Hofstra University
University of Houston Law Center	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates.

University of Idaho

University of Louisville Brandeis School of Law

Employers may pre-select 100%, but are encouraged to consider factors other than strict academic performance. Several employers try to interview all who submit resumes.

Indiana University Maurer School of Law

Employers are encouraged to see all interested candidates, but may pre-select as they choose.

Indiana University McKinney School of Law

Students submit bids to apply for an interview with a participating employer. Employers select the students they wish to interview from the bids received for the position.

The John Marshall Law School

University of Kansas

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers preselect 90% of their candidates; 10% are selected by lottery.

University of Kentucky

Employers have the option to pre-screen resumes. However, approximately 15% of employers coming on campus choose instead to see all interested candidates.

Lewis & Clark Law School

We permit 100% pre-selection of students by employers.

Liberty University School of Law

Employers may preselect but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

University of Louisville—

H. WHAT SCHOOLS DO WITH MULTIPLE LSAT SCORES

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

University of Akron	If an applicant has multiple LSAT scores, we will consider the highest score.
University of Alabama	Highest score considered.
Albany Law School	Highest score considered.
American University	Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.
Appalachian School of Law	Highest valid LSAT score taken.
University of Arizona	Most scores are averaged unless they are 10 points or more apart. If they are, we use the higher score.
Arizona State University College of Law	The highest score is used in all reporting and given more significant consideration. Admissions committee sees and reviews all scores.
University of Arkansas—Fayetteville	We take the highest of the final three scores.
Atlanta's John Marshall Law School	The Admissions Committee will see all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.
University of Baltimore	Highest score used.
Baylor University	Highest score considered.
Boston College Law School	Adheres to the ABA policy of reporting the higher LSAT score, but considers all scores in the file review process. The admissions committee will consider addenda explaining differences in scores.
Boston University School of Law	Highest score considered.
University of Baltimore	If more than 7 points apart and GPA is 3.0 plus, take highest.
Brooklyn Law School	The Committee on Admissions sees all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.
University of California—Berkeley	Take highest score.
University of California—Davis	The Admission Committee will use the high score for purposes of a final admission decision, however it has access to all scores earned within the past five years. In exceptional cases where there is a significant difference exists between scores, applicants may choose to provide a brief addendum of explanation. The highest score will be the recorded score in all reports and publications.
University of California— Hastings College of the Law	Highest score used.
University of California—Irvine	The admission committee will see all reported but will count the highest as the official score.
University of California—Los Angeles	Highest score with discretion of considering all.
California Western University	Most recent if highest, otherwise averaged.
Campbell University	We generally use the highest score; however, we do consider each individual score and any explanation offered for the lower score.
Capital University	Will consider highest score; generally, for three or more scores, the average is used. Explanations for differences welcome.
Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)	Review all scores, may give highest consideration to high LSAT.

Case Western Reserve University	Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.
Catholic University of America	Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Chapman University Fowler School of Law	The ABA has changed the rule regarding the reporting of the highest of multiple LSAT scores, however, this does not change the review process. If the candidate has taken the LSAT multiple times, the Committee will review all of the LSAT scores. From an admissions perspective, the average score may be the best indication of an applicant's success. It is advisable for the applicant to explain why one score is more indicative of his or her likelihood of success. For merit scholarship purpose, we will utilize the high LSAT SCORE.
Charleston School of Law	Highest score considered.
University of Chicago	We review all scores, however for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.
Chicago–Kent College of Law	If the LSAT is taken more than once, the Admissions Committee may consider the average score, the more recent score or the higher score, depending on individual circumstances. Preference is typically given to the highest score earned.
University of Cincinnati	Use highest score.
City University of New York (CUNY) School of Law	Consider all scores, with some weight being given to highest.
University of Colorado	Consider and review all scores, but high LSAT score is used when reporting.
Columbia University	The Committee considers the entire LSAT testing history when evaluating applications for admission.
University of Connecticut	All scores are considered however, the high LSAT score is used when reporting.
Cornell University	Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed. Explanations for differences are suggested.
Creighton University	Use higher score unless there is reason to discount one.
University of Dayton	Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.
University of Denver	Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.
DePaul University College of Law	We will consider the high score.
University of Detroit Mercy	We review all scores.
University of the District of Columbia School of Law	Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Drake University	Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.
Duke University	Will consider higher score or average, depending on circumstances and the overall context of the application. An addendum is suggested when there is a significant difference between test scores.
Duquesne University	Consider the highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University	The highest score is used.
Elon University	Highest Score considered.
Emory University	The highest LSAT score is used.
University of Florida	Review all scores. Candidates should discuss score differences.
Florida Coastal School of Law	Florida Coastal School of Law uses the highest score.
Florida International University	Only the applicant's highest LSAT score is considered.
Florida State University	Average. Consider all scores within 5 years.

Fordham University	Consider all scores, but report the high as per ABA instructions.
George Mason University	We utilize the high LSAT.
George Washington University	We use the high LSAT.
Georgetown University Law Center	For reporting purposes, Georgetown Law adheres to the ABA policy of reporting the higher LSAT score. For evaluation purposes, the Georgetown Admissions Committee typically averages LSAT scores. Georgetown may consider the higher LSAT score if you have only taken the LSAT twice. Please address any mitigating circumstances you feel the Admissions Committee should consider.
University of Georgia	Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.
Georgia State University	Admissions Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.
Golden Gate University	We utilize high LSAT.
Gonzaga University	We utilize the high LSAT.
Hamline University School of Law	All scores considered significant weight to highest.
Harvard Law School	We have access to all scores on file at LSAC, but evaluate your highest score.
University of Hawaii William S. Richardson School of Law	We take the higher score.
Maurice A. Deane School of Law —Hofstra University	The Admissions Committee will review all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.
University of Houston Law Center	Primary consideration given to the highest score.
University of Idaho	More weight placed on higher score.
University of Illinois	Take the highest score.
Indiana University Maurer School of Law	Take the highest score.
Indiana University McKinney School of Law	Take the highest score.
University of Iowa	We use the higher score.
The John Marshall Law School	We tend to use the highest score.
University of Kansas	Consider all scores, but give the most weight to the highest score.
University of Kentucky	Multiple scores are averaged in almost all cases.
Lewis & Clark Law School	Use the highest score, but all scores are seen.
Liberty University School of Law	Use the highest score.
University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law	Emphasize the most recent score in our evaluation process. Appreciate explanations for multiple takings.
Loyola Law School—Los Angeles	The average score is used unless the applicant has submitted an explanation for the lower score.
Loyola University—Chicago	Higher of 2 scores, if highest is most recent.
University of Maine School of Law	Averages scores, significant increase noted.
University of Maryland	Use the higher score.
Marquette University	Use the higher score.

Mercer University	All scores reviewed, highest LSAT reported to ABA.
University of Memphis	Use highest for multiple takings.
University of Miami	Highest LSAT given the greater weight.
University of Michigan	Report highest score, but consideration given to each score and to average.
Michigan State University	Only the highest is considered.
Mississippi College School of Law	Use highest score but review the range of scores.
University of Mississippi	Admissions decisions are based upon the highest LSAT score.
University of Missouri—Columbia	If two LSAT scores, the higher score is considered. If more than two LSAT scores, the scores are averaged.
University of Missouri—Kansas City	Use the higher score, although all scores are considered before making an admission decision.
University of Montana	Focus on highest score but all scores are considered before making an admission decision.
University of Nebraska	Average multiple LSAT scores. Admission Committee reviews all scores.
University of Nevada—Las Vegas	Highest LSAT given the greater weight.
New England Law/Boston	Use the highest score, although all scores are taken into consideration.
University of New Hampshire School of Law	Review all; report highest score.
New York Law School	Use the highest score posted within a five year period.
New York University	The Committee on Admissions evaluates LSAT scores based on the average score in most cases. The Committee may take special circumstances into account. If a candidate can point out specific reasons why the Committee should consider an LSAT score aberrant, they should detail those reasons in an addendum to the personal statement.
University of North Carolina	We use the higher of two scores. With more than two scores, we decide on a case by case basis between average or highest.
North Carolina Central University	Average multiple LSAT scores.
Northern Kentucky University Chase College of Law	We use the highest score. Explanation of multiple scores encouraged.
Northeastern University School of Law	We use the highest LSAT score.
Northern Illinois University	Average multiple scores (but the admissions committee sees the separate scores)
Northwestern University	Takes the highest.
University of Notre Dame Law School	Review all scores; consider the highest.
Nova Southeastern University	We take the highest LSAT score.
Ohio Northern University	Take highest LSAT score.
Ohio State	We average.
Oklahoma City University	We use highest LSAT only.
University of Oklahoma	Highest LSAT score
University of Oregon	Consider all scores, but we report the highest score to the ABA.
Pace University	Take the highest LSAT score.

University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law	All scores will be considered for the purpose of making a decision on admissions. Applicants with significant differences in score (5 or more points) will, under most circumstances be asked to write a written explanation.
Penn State Law	We consider all scores with emphasis on highest. Applicants with significant differences (five points or more) are encouraged to provide a brief explanation in an addendum.
University of Pennsylvania	If you take the LSAT more than once, all scores and their average will be considered. If there are circumstances that you believe affected your performance on a prior test, we encourage you to provide an additional statement with your application explaining those circumstances. The Admissions Committee will consider such information and may, at its discretion, evaluate your application based on the higher or highest LSAT score.
University of Pittsburgh	We use the highest LSAT score.
University of Puerto Rico	Take the highest score as a general rule. However, spread of scores is considered.
Quinnipiac University	We take the highest LSAT score.
Regent University School of Law	Review all test scores, the highest score is heavily weighted.
University of Richmond	We take the highest LSAT score, but all scores are reviewed and explanations for significant differences in scores are encouraged.
Roger Williams University School of Law	We take the highest score.
Rutgers Law School	Take the highest score.
Samford University—Cumberland	Take highest score.
St. John's University	Take highest score.
Saint Louis University	Take highest score.
St. Mary's University	Take highest score.
University of St. Thomas of Law (MN)	We see all scores but consider the high score for decisions.
St. Thomas University	Take the high score.
University of San Diego	The highest score is used but scores are reviewed.
University of San Francisco	Take the highest score for both admission and scholarship consideration.
Santa Clara University	Take the highest score.
Seattle University School of Law	Take highest score, but spread of scores is considered.
Seton Hall University School of Law	All scores reviewed, highest score given greatest weight.

Southern Illinois University	Highest score only.
SMU Dedman School of Law	We take the highest reported LSAT score.
Southwestern Law School	Southwestern takes the highest score; however, spread of multiple scores considered.
Stanford Law School	All valid LSAT scores are reviewed.
Suffolk University Law School	Take the highest score for admissions.

SUNY Buffalo Law School	While the Admissions Committee will see all reported scores, we place considerably more weight on the highest LSAT score.
Stetson University College of Law	Stetson takes the highest score. Extenuating circumstances are taken into consideration.
Syracuse University	Syracuse Law will still review all LSAT scores in the overall evaluation process. The student's HIGHEST LSAT attempt is the score that will be calculated with the cumulative GPA to determine the index number and is the score generally used to make a decision.
Temple University Beasley School of Law	Temple University Beasley School of Law will consider the high LSAT score, although all LSAT scores are reviewed and applicants should provide a written explanation if there is a significant difference between one or more LSAT scores.
University of Tennessee	We look at the highest score, but all test scores are reviewed. Students are encouraged to submit an addendum if they would like to explain a change in LSAT score.
University of Texas	We review all scores but will take the highest score.
Texas Tech University	1–5 point span, we use highest; over 5 points, we use the newest score.
Texas A&M University School of Law	The Admissions Committee will consider all reported scores and give greater weight to the highest score.
Thomas M. Cooley	Consider only the highest score in our admission formula. Score must be within 5 years of application date.
University of Toledo	Highest score only.
Touro Law Center—Jacob D. Fuchsberg	Touro Law takes the higher/highest score (provide contextual information/addendum if there is a dramatic difference in scores).
Tulane University	Tulane looks at all scores, but relies on the applicant to explain why a higher score should be given more weight.
University of Tulsa	Take the Highest Score.
University of Utah	We will presumptively use the highest score. The reviewer, however, may use the average score if information in the file indicate that the score is the most appropriate measure of the candidates skills.
Valparaiso University	Highest score.
Vanderbilt Law School	Readers consider all scores and their average.
Vermont Law School	Take highest score.
Villanova University	The Admissions Committee will consider the high LSAT score, although all LSAT scores are reviewed and applicants should provide a written explanation if there is a significant difference between one or more LSAT scores.
University of Virginia	Highest score.
Wake Forest University	We average if test taken more than twice.
Washburn University School of Law	Highest score.
University of Washington	Review all score information available. Highest score is considered for reporting purposes.
Washington and Lee University	Will consider explanation for widely disparate scores
Washington University School of Law	For admittance and scholarship purposes, students are evaluated based on their highest LSAT score. However, all scores are reviewed so vast discrepancies should be explained.

Western New England University School of Law

We take the high score.

Western State College of Law

We will review all scores but give consideration to the highest score.

Widener University
Delaware Law School

We review all scores, however, for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.

Willamette University

Take highest score as a general rule; however, spread of scores is considered.

William & Mary

Consideration is given to individual scores and related circumstances. Reports are prepared using direction provided. (Example: The ABA uses the highest LSAT, accordingly so does William & Mary Law School.)

William Mitchell College of Law

Review all scores but give consideration to the highest.

University of Wisconsin

We take the highest LSAT score. If there is a significant discrepancy and a written explanation is provided, we will take all factors into consideration.

University of Wyoming

University of Wyoming takes the highest of multiple LSAT scores.

Yale Law School

Review all score information available. We do not average or take the high score

J. PREFERRED MEANS OF RECEIVING LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Each law school was asked to indicate its preferred means of receiving letters of recommendation. The four options listed below were offered. The list indicates preferences of schools responding.

- (1) We accept those letters of recommendation which have been processed through the Law Services Letters of Recommendation Services.
- (2) We prefer that students use the Law Services Letter of Recommendation Services but do accept letters directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institutions' credential service.
- (3) We prefer letters which come directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institution's credential service but do accept letters from the Law Service Letter of Recommendation Service.
- (4) We have no preference.

L. SCHOOLS USING A FORMULA IN THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

These schools indicated that a formula is used for pre-sorting and as an aid in determining the process for considering the file but not for determining the decision.

The specific formula used by a law school is provided in cases where that information is available.

FAQs

DIVERSITY AND DISTRIBUTION

How do you define diversity?

Do you still consider diversity in your admission process?

In your financial aid policy, how much do you calculate for living expenses?

If yours is a state school, what % of students are in state?

The University of Akron School of Law	73%	$12,454.00		We believe that race, gender, age geography, undergraduate and graduate studies, work experience, volunteerism, extracurricular activities, and personal life experiences contribute to the diversity of the student body.
Albany Law School		$18,642.00	Yes	Albany Law School's students, faculty and staff are diverse in race, age, religious beliefs, national and ethnic origins, political affiliation and sexual orientation. President & Dean Penelope Andrews exemplifies this as a woman who grew up in South Africa and has taught and researched law in numerous countries and continents. Albany Law School's multicultural initiatives include counseling services, culturally diverse programs, recruiting a diverse student body, and building the Diversity Internship and Mentor Program.
Arizona State University	75%	$20,906.00	Yes	We consider diversity of perspective that can be obtained through background and experience, looking at factors that include (but are not limited to) cultural, linguistic, economic, gender, sexual orientation, age, work experience, life experience, academic and intellectual pursuits and other factors.

Boston University School of Law	N/A	$18,902.00	Yes	BU Law values and recognizes the importance of diversity. An ethnically, socio-economically, and otherwise diverse class is essential to the education of each student. As a producer of leaders in legal practice, government or other public service, academia, and business, BU Law continues its long standing tradition of providing opportunities for persons of all backgrounds and providing the excellent training to which a diverse classroom is indispensable.
Brooklyn Law School		$24,399.00	Yes	No goals or quotas are set, but an applicant's potential contribution to diversity is another consideration in determining which applicant's are selected for admission. This latter criterion necessarily involves an assessment of such factors as geographic origin; membership in a disadvantaged economic, racial or ethnic group; personal interest and talents; special achievements; prior life experience; leadership qualities; and maturity. These elements reflect the Law School's concern that every applicant, regardless of age, sex, disability, race, color, religion, national or ethnic origin, sexual orientation, marital status or parental status, be given every reasonable change for consideration and admission.

Hastings seeks each year to enroll students whose intellect, experience, creativity, and personal character will enable them successfully to complete their own legal education, contribute to the education of their classmates, and become accomplished lawyers who serve the needs of the public through the practice of law, the formulation of public policy, legal scholarship, and other professional endeavors. Because numeric criteria do not necessarily indicate whether an applicant will meet or contribute to these goals, Hastings considers a variety of non numeric criteria. These criteria include letters of recommendation, academic honors and awards, the rigor and difficulty of the applicant's undergraduate and graduate education, communications skills, work experience, public service, and significant achievement in other nonacademic activities. Hastings also considers whether the applicant is among the first in his or her family to attend college, is a member of groups that historically have been underrepresented in law school and the legal profession, or has experienced significant medical, personal, educational, or other adversity.

University of San Diego	n/a	$21,821.00	Yes	The University of San Diego seeks to enroll a highly qualified and diverse student body to ensure academic excellence and enrichment of legal education as well as legal profession through the participation of students with different perspectives and backgrounds. While LSAT and undergraduate GPA are important elements, other factors are significant in the admission decision process.
University of San Francisco School of Law	75%	$29,760.00	Yes	USF seeks to admit a diverse group of students who are among the most capable law students in the nation. We seek students who will work to promote the well-being of society, further the cause of justice domestically and abroad, and contribute to the common good. At USF there is no formula to guarantee admission. Instead we consider multiple factors, including an applicant's undergraduate grade point average, LSAT score, undergraduate school, undergraduate course selection, and any graduate degrees. In addition, we consider past work experience, recommendations, community service, an applicant's overall potential to render significant contributions to the legal profession, and diversity. Diversity is a core value of the law school, and, consistent with our mission, we aim to admit students from diverse backgrounds, including men and women of differing races, ethnicities, religions, sexual orientations, and ages as well as individuals with disabilities. Diversity enables students to learn from one another, promotes a variety of perspectives, and enhances empathy and critical engagement. In particular, the law school has a goal of providing meaningful representation of historically underrepresented minorities, such as African Americans and Latinos. We recognize that, by virtue of our nation's struggle with racial inequality, such students are both likely to have experiences of particular importance to the law school's mission and are less likely to be admitted in meaningful numbers on criteria that ignore those experiences. To help us assess these qualities, applicants may submit an optional essay on diversity.
Santa Clara University	n/a	$17,204.00	Yes	The School of Law has adopted a special admissions policy that recognizes the national need for representation in the legal profession for those groups that traditionally have been under represented, including, but not limited to, members of ethnic minority groups. This policy recognizes that the traditional criteria of LSAT scores and undergraduate grade point averages are not the only indicators of academic potential. Other relevant factors which are considered include academic potential and motivation as indicated by letters of recommendation or other sources of information, practical experiences and achievements in service to the applicant's community, an extracurricular studies or activities that indicate motivation for success in law school.
Seattle University School of Law		$21,888.00	Yes	Seattle University School of Law embraces a wholly nondiscriminatory admission policy and philosophy. We welcome applications from all persons without regard to age, sex, race, religion, color, national origin, marital status, sexual or political orientation, or disability. In addition, we consider a candidate's evidence of particular talents or backgrounds that will contribute specifically to the diversity of the law school community.

December LSAT Questions

If an applicant takes the LSAT a second time in December, do you prefer that the applicant.

- a) complete and forward their application but notify you that they will be taking the test in December; or
- b) wait to submit their application until a score is received?

School	(a)	(b)	Describe
American University	X
Atlanta's John Marshall Law School			No preference, we will hold for the December score if requested by the applicant. Same applies for June LSAT.
Boston College Law School			No preference
Boston University School of Law			No preference
Brooklyn Law School	X		Either is fine; we'll hold for the December score if they e-mail us separately and request it.

University of California—Irvine			No preference
University of California—Los Angeles			No preference
Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)	X
Chapman University Fowler School of Law	X		Our application asks for any LSAT tests you have taken or plan to take. If you decide to take an LSAT test that you did not indicate on your application, you need to notify the Law Admission Office so that your application can be placed on hold until the score is received. Once a decision is rendered there is no appeals process; all decisions are final. You can either apply after your score has been received or before, and we will hold your application for all tests taken before our application deadline of April 15. It may be beneficial to submit your application beforehand so that we can begin processing your documents.
Charleston School of Law	X		Either is fine.

IN-STATE TUITION RATES AFTER ONE YEAR

For the purpose of in-state tuition rates at state law schools, are students able to be counted as state residents after a year of enrollment?

University of California—Berkeley	Students have the opportunity to become California residents after their first year of law school.
University of California—Davis	Yes, most non-residents become eligible to apply for resident status at the beginning of their 2nd or 3rd year of law study but must meet the eligibility requirements.
University of California—Hastings	Yes, most non-residents qualify for resident tuition for their 2nd + 3rd years, provided they take the necessary steps to
University of California—Irvine	Yes, most non-residents qualify for resident tuition 2L and 3L years as long as they've taken the necessary steps to become a California resident.
University of California—Los Angeles	Yes, most non-residents do qualify for resident tuition in the 2L and 3L years so long as they satisfactorily follow the steps to becoming a California resident.
University of Cincinnati College of Law	Yes, students can reclassify as Ohio residents after one year.
City University of New York (CUNY) School of Law	Yes, if the student meets the residency requirements.
University of Colorado	Yes, a student may apply to be reclassified as a Colorado resident for tuition purposes after one year.
Florida International University	Non-residents may qualify for resident tuition after their first year if they meet Florida residency requirements.
University of Georgia	Yes, if the student meets the requirements for establishing state residency. See www.law.uga.edu/georgia-residency
Georgia State University	Yes, if an applicant applies to Georgia State University as a non-resident his/her status to resident will not automatically change. The applicant must complete a Petition for Georgia Residency and provide documentation i.e. tax forms, driver's license, etc... to support the status change after a year.
University of Hawaii William S. Richardson School of Law	No.
University of Houston Law Center	Yes, a student may apply to be reclassified as a Texas resident for tuition purposes. The decision to reclassify is based on a number of factors, including whether the student attended high school in Texas, is a dependent of a parent/guardian who resides in Texas, owns property in Texas, etc.
University of Idaho	Yes, but the law was recently changed and interpretations of the law are not yet available. When promulgated, they can be found at www.registrar.uidaho.edu/residency .

FAQs

IN-STATE TUITION RATES AFTER ONE YEAR

For the purpose of in-state tuition rates at state law schools, are students able to be counted as state residents after a year of enrollment?

University of Missouri—Columbia	Yes, most students are able to qualify as a resident after their first-year by petitioning to the Residency Office. See http://law.missouri.edu/admissions/financialaid/residency.html for requirements and additional information.
University of Missouri—Kansas City	Yes, with petition to campus office of residency.
University of Nevada—Las Vegas	Yes, after 12 months of residence, students may apply for residency and receive in-state tuition.
University of New Hampshire	No.
University of North Carolina	Yes, if you meet the requirements for establishing state residency. See http://www.law.unc.edu/admissions/residency/default.aspx .
Northern Kentucky University Chase College of Law	No
University of Oklahoma	See http://www.ou.edu/admissions/home/resident_tuition_regulations.html for information.
University of Oregon	Most often students who matriculate as nonresidents then graduate as nonresidents.
Penn State Law	No.
University of Pittsburgh	Students may apply for in-state tuition through the Office of Tuition Eligibility.
St. Thomas University School of Law	We do not distinguish in-state and out of state since we are a private school.
Southern Illinois University School of Law	Yes, students can become an in-state resident after six months.
SUNY Buffalo Law School	Yes, students may apply for in-state residency after residing in New York State for a minimum of 12 months. Detailed information and additional eligibility requirements can be found online at: http://studentaccounts.buffalo.edu/residency/application.php
Temple University Beasley School of Law	The general rule is that if a student did not live in the state of Pennsylvania for at least one year while not in school and prior to enrolling, he/she is presumed to be a non-resident for tuition purposes. However, a student may overcome this presumption by showing that he/she came to the state for reasons other than attending law school, or by providing sufficient proof of intent to remain in the state after graduation from law school.
Texas A&M University School of Law	Yes, non-resident students can qualify for resident tuition if they have taken the steps to meet the requirements of becoming a Texas Resident for tuition purposes. Additionally, non-resident students who receive a scholarship or tuition waiver greater than $1,000 are eligible to qualify for resident tuition.
University of Toledo	Students are able to reapply for residency classification after one year. It is possible that students will be reclassified as Ohio residents for tuition purposes provided they meet certain definitions and/or requirements.
University of Tulsa College of Law	No in or out of state distinction $24,600/year for all.
University of Utah	Students may apply for residency after completing 40 credits. Students earn 30 credits at the end of the first year of law school. They may then take 10 credits during the summer to apply for residency by the fall of second year.
University of Washington	No.
William & Mary	Yes, any student may apply for residency classification when they believe they qualify. Eligibility information and the domicile form is located on the web.
William S. Boyd School of Law	Yes, if student meets requirements for establishing state residency.
University of Wisconsin	No.
University of Wyoming	Yes, students can be considered for resident tuition after one year, if they have met residency requirements.

Do you offer any joint degree programs which are designed to be completed in three years? If so, please list and describe.

Creighton University	Yes	J.D./M.B.A.—The School of Law and the College of Business Administration offer a coordinated program leading to the separate conferral of both the Juris Doctor and Master of Business Administration degrees. This innovative program allows students to obtain both degrees at a lower cost and in less time than would be required if each degree were earned separately. The JD/MS in Government Organization and Leadership (GOAL) joint degree program prepares students for leadership positions with government entities and the organizations that work closely with them. Students gain an invaluable mix of career-driven legal experience and professional subtleties that can't be learned from a textbook. They will see the inner workings of our nation's capital. This program allows students to obtain both degrees at a lower cost and in less time than would be required if each degree was earned separately. J.D./M.S. in Negotiation and Dispute Resolution—The School of Law and the Werner Institute for Negotiation and Dispute Resolution offer a coordinated program leading to the separate conferral of both the Juris Doctor and Master of Science in Negotiation and Dispute Resolution degrees. This program allows students to obtain both degrees at a lower cost and in less time than would be required if each degree were earned separately. The Werner Institute is one of the premier programs of its kind in the nation and the location of this interdisciplinary program within the Law School allows students pursuing both degrees the opportunity to simultaneously leverage the strengths of the Law School and the Institute.

MORE FAQs

In the past year, have you added any joint degree programs which are designed to be completed in three years? If so, please list and describe.

Regent University School of Law	No	No new three year programs, but we added a new Two-Year Accelerated Program-launching May 2013 Students save considerable time and living expenses while earning the same academically rigorous Regent legal education taught from a Christian worldview. Students will enter the job market one year sooner than students in a traditional 3-year program. Students study full-time for six consecutive terms by starting in late May as opposed to mid-August. After the first summer, accelerated program students are integrated into the same classes as all other law students, studying the same curriculum under the same professors as enjoyed by students in the traditional three-year program. Students will experience a law-practice externship as a part of the Accelerated Program. Due to a rigorous schedule, students will have less opportunity for extracurricular activities and summer employment. Requires at least a 152 LSAT, a 3.0 cumulative UGPA, and other indicators of high academic promise. Applications and supporting documents should be submitted via the LSAC website. Priority consideration date for the two-year program is January 15. Late applications are considered on a space-available basis. Students admitted to the program must submit an enrollment agreement and seat deposit no later than April 1. It is recommended that applicants take the October or December LSAT preceding the desired June enrollment. Applicants must submit an addendum in their application addressing their reasons for seeking enrollment in an accelerated, rigorous program of study. The admissions committee will be looking for a commitment to disciplined, intensive legal study.

In the past year, have you initiated any new scholarships, need or merit based?

Roger Williams University School of Law	No
University of St. Thomas School of Law (MN)		Each year we have new donor funded scholarships available for students. We also have a new Dean's Public Service Scholarship which is a guaranteed 20% annual scholarship for students who have completed a minimum of one year of service with a qualifying organization. The Access to Justice Scholars program is a $75,000 scholarship program for individuals who have an interest in and commitment to pursuing legal practice in a small-town or rural setting. Through the program, UST School of Law works with the Minnesota State Bar Association to match Access to Justice scholars with a mentor experienced in small-town or rural practice. All academically qualified applicants are invited to submit an essay explaining their interest in, and commitment to, pursuing legal practice in a small-town or rural setting. The essay should be submitted with the application for admission. Applicants will be invited to interview with a faculty admissions committee. Awardees are granted $25,000 or the equivalent percentage of tuition each year of the three-year J.D. program.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY

- a) Resumé: Required. The résumé should reflect all full-time and part-time employment, both paid and unpaid, and all extracurricular activities and honors. Please format your résumé in reverse chronological order, with the most recent employment at the top and indicate for each position whether it was full-time, part-time, paid, or unpaid. Please do not include high school activities or awards in your résumé. There is no required length for the résumé. Occasionally, the Admissions Committee will request further clarification of an applicant’s activities.
- b) Personal Statement: Required. Most are approximately two pages long, double-spaced. Your personal statement should discuss the significant personal, social, or academic experiences that have contributed to your decision to study law.
- c) Diversity Statement: Optional. This essay is your opportunity to discuss any aspect of your background or life experience that you believe will enhance your ability to contribute to the diverse BU classroom experience and community. BU Law values and recognizes the importance of diversity. An ethnically, socio-economically, and otherwise diverse class is essential to the education of each student. As a producer of leaders in legal practice, government or other public service, academia, and business, BU Law continues its long-standing tradition of providing opportunities for persons of all backgrounds and providing the excellent training to which a diverse classroom is indispensable.
- d) Unique Statement for your school: n/a.
- e) Additional Essays: n/a.
- f) Letters of Recommendation: Required. Minimum of 2 and maximum of 4. Each letter should come from someone who taught the applicant in a substantive college or postgraduate course. Given that two-thirds of the incoming class takes time between their undergraduate career and law school, it is acceptable to submit letters from employers.

LIBERTY UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF LAW

- a) Resumé: Recommended.
- b) Personal Statement: Required—Applicants are required to provide a personal statement as part of their Application for Admission. Personal statements must be typed double-spaced, using a 12-point font. Optimal length is four pages, but the number of pages is optional. Applicants should address each of the points below, in order of preference. In addition, applicants may wish to present information regarding family background, educational opportunities, financial resources, etc., that may have affected their academic performance or test scores. Applicants should address these 5 points in their personal statement:
 - 1. Calling: Why do you want to be a lawyer? Describe your personal and professional goals.
 - 2. Mission: Explain your reasons for applying to Liberty University School of Law. Include your perspective on faith, life, and morality, and why the law school’s distinct mission is attractive to you.
 - 3. Talents: Share any personal talents, strengths, character traits, and interests that contribute to your preparation to study and practice law.
 - 4. Experience: What educational, employment, and life experiences have contributed to your preparation for the study of law? (Scholastic, civic, and professional honors or awards may be cited here or in your optional résumé.)
Influences: Discuss particular factors that have had a significant impact on your personal, professional, or spiritual growth, or your vision for the future.
- c) Diversity Statement: n/a.
- d) Unique Statement for your school: See personal statement requirements.
- e) Additional Essays:
- f) Letters of Recommendation: Required. Two letters of recommendation are required. One recommendation (preferably from a faculty advisor or professor in major field of study) should address applicant’s academic performance and abilities. If the applicant has been out of school for several years or has served in the military, a letter from an employer or commanding officer is appropriate. The second recommendation should be a character reference from someone who has personal knowledge of the applicant’s integrity. Letters of recommendation from family members or from “VIPs” lacking personal knowledge of you are of no value. Recommenders may send letters to the Law School Admission Council (LSAC) or directly to the School of Law Office of Admissions.
- g) Addenda—areas of content: n/a.
