Report by the President:

A summary statement of President Raab's report to the Senate is as follows:

"Hello everyone and welcome back. It is good to see all of you. I have a few announcements. We are very happy to welcome forty-nine new faculty members to Hunter College. Despite the budget pressures it is exciting to be able to add to the intellectual community. We have a new Dean of the Social Work School starting in January, James Blackburn, whom you will all get to meet. In the meantime, we have been lucky to recruit form retirement Professor Harold Weissman, who has been the acting Dean before.

We are doing very well in enrollment at Hunter, which means growing a little bit. There is a difference between enrollment and admission, and we are extraordinarily fortunate that we always have too many people who want to come here. As you know, our goal has been to try to grow minimally so that we can provide classes, library space, resources, technology and counseling for the student body that we have. When you see that Hunter's admissions statistics have gone up, please know that our enrollment has grown under 1% in programs where there was need. The reason for higher admission numbers is that there was a very large graduation rate last year and we have replaced the population. We are not trying to grow the school until we have space and additional facilities to accommodate students.

We have been successful this summer in helping the students who needed financial help because of the tuition increase. About 140 students come forward, and we were able to give aid to over 100 of these students through a variety of sources. It is our goal to insure that nobody leaves school because of the tuition increase, and we need everyone's help to be able to accomplish that.

We are beginning to see some very nice fundraising successes. In June we brought in one million dollars from two benefits, one to help restore Roosevelt House and the other for the Brookdale Center on Aging to endow the position of an Executive Director. We are very lucky to have hired a true specialist in social public health policy to run the Aging Center, Dennis Kodner. Our new Dean of the Social Work School is also a gerontologist, and this will enable us to secure our very strong position in the policy of aging and the needs of the aging population in an urban environment. We have been doing very well in our Annual Fund and that will enable us to help students in need this year.

We have made a concerted effort over the summer to improve the facilities at Hunter and to improve services at Hunter within our budget constraints. I will ask Len to talk about the work we have done."

President Raab yielded the floor to Vice President Zinnanti, who said:

"Good afternoon. I am happy to report that the sub-committee charged with doing the food service contract was successful. They did hit virtually every bureaucratic bump in the road that they could. The sub-committee consisted of students, faculty, as well as administration representatives. A contract was awarded at the end of August to a vendor who came to us with terrific references and,
President Raab yielded the floor to Vice President Ayravainen who said:

"I want to thank everyone who served on the Technology Fee Committee. A lot of work was done and there have been terrific results. We are encouraging faculty to submit proposals to use technology in the classrooms.

We are indebted to the Senate for an initiative that started when I began, which was to look at how we provide services to students. We are implementing the recommendations of the student services task force and have begun a number of initiatives. The Office of Student Services has been sending out an e-bulletin to students every week to inform them about opportunities for scholarships, fellowships, work, counseling sessions, advising, and for whatever we feel would enhance a student experience and support their study skills and their ability to stay in school and to help them graduate. I will ask Eija to talk for a few minutes about the changes in the orientation program that she and Dean Friedlander have been working on in cooperation with Professor Tronto, and also a little bit about TurnItIn.com which is an important initiative to help us deal effectively with the problem of plagiarism and academic integrity on the campus."

President Raab yielded the floor to Vice President Zinnanti, who said:

"This year we started a 2-day orientation for all new freshmen and transfer students. When students come in with their parents, we actually give an orientation to parents so that they can ask questions, and we talk to them about what College is all about. We talk to the students in a separate room and we tell them all about College, placement tests, credits. Then they return the following month to register. That is when we have a team approach with representatives from the Registrar’s Office,
Admissions Office, Immunization Office, and Student Life Offices to help students succeed at being here. We registered quite a number of students this summer starting in May and ending about August 30th.

Transfer students have a variety of problems as they come in. We have worked out a system of advising students in groups of 10 with a counselor as well as a peer counselor, and we work with them on one-on-one basis. The Student Center in room 417 West will follow up. We have programs for transfer students as well as for new students. Throughout the semester we will be sending emails and bulletins with information about what they need to do, whether they need to declare their major or check with their advisors and so forth.

We are also instituting a system where we will ask you for help in recruiting new students. I hope that you see yourself as a recruiter, as well as a person who will retain students at the College.

I also want to mention to you that we have a program for students at risk. If you notice during the first weeks of classes that you have students who would benefit from participating in study skills workshops on how to take tests, how to read textbooks, how to study for tests and things of that sort, please refer those students to us.

On July 1st we installed a plagiarism service, TurnItIn.com, in the Library, which faculty may use to check for academic dishonesty or plagiarism. This databank has 2 billion pages, and you can just go on the website to find out how it works. Anand Padmanbhan will arrange workshops for faculty on how to use this service.

We have been able to hire a new Director of Advising and Counseling, Linda Carlson, who joined our staff this summer. Linda is working on a liaison from our office to all departments, so that there will be one individual that you can contact and that will be your person in Student Services. We hope to be working as a partnership and if you have any questions, problems, or suggestions, please email me or come and see me."

Vice President Ayravainen yielded the floor to President Raab, who said:

"A few personnel announcements: We were sad to lose our fearless registrar Yechiel Rosenrauch to N.Y.U., who very smartly recruited him. But we are extremely lucky that another great citizen of this community, Marilyn Daley Weston, has agreed to be the acting Registrar. I can think of nobody better qualified in intelligence, temperament, and everything else to take it over, and I want to give her a round of applause for agreeing to serve. I also want to take this opportunity to thank Sandra Clarkson for extraordinary service as chair of the Sexual Harassment Panel. That was not an easy job, and we truly thank her. I am pleased to announce that Susan Lees of the Anthropology department has agreed to assume that position. Another person I want to thank is Bill Zlata. When we are talking about keeping our enrollment steady so that we can provide the services we need to our students that is due to Bill’s secret genius for being able to manipulate all sorts of numbers and guess things that nobody else would be able to guess. Finally, I want to thank Shirley Cohen for being the true leader that she has always been in the School of Education and for agreeing to serve this year as the acting Dean.

Regarding the blackout, the good news is that we have emergency generators in almost all of the schools so that the elevators continued to work and there was power in the hallways so that people could see. The only place that did not happen was unfortunately in Thomas Hunter Hall where two people were actually stuck in the elevator. They were lucky to be rescued by Julio Vasquez who came in and did an incredible job. You should all know, that to the best of our abilities, we will always stay open for the community as an emergency shelter. Because we were the only place on Lexington Avenue with any light we were able to shelter people who were stuck in Manhattan. Some of you who were stranded here all night know that we remained open. We were able to keep the restrooms open thanks to the incredible staff who worked to keep them clean all night. We gave out whatever food we had in the building, and kept people’s spirits up to the extent we could. It turned out that one of the women that we were particularly attentive to that night, was a woman who was six months pregnant and started to walk home. and found herself here. We kept an eye on her and took care of her. I was able to give her a ride home and on the way home she said: 'I think I'll put Hunter in my column'. It turned out that she was a syndicated columnist and we have been getting little notes from Utah, and all over the country saying how great Hunter College is for being a good community activist. It was a nice story.

The collaborative effort between the New York City Department of Education and Hunter College to open a new High School was successful, and on Monday ninety-four ninth graders began at the Manhattan Hunter College High School for Science, which is based at Martin Luther King High School on 66th and Amsterdam. We will tell you more about this initiative to improve science education in high schools, so that we can begin to assist students coming into College to take advantage of our very strong science offerings.

I'm extremely gratified, and I want to thank Richard Pizer for working so hard on this, that Hunter has moved back to where it belongs in the Tier 2 rankings in the U.S. News and World Report. We have not only moved back but we have also moved up. We had been number seventy-four in 2001, eighty-two in 2002, and eighty-seven last year. We are now back at 66, and I thank everyone in this room for their effort and for devoting themselves to this institution. Tier 1 is next."

Report by the Ombudsmans:

Mr. Mark Weinstock, the current Ombudsman, presented the report as distributed. The complete report attached as Appendix II.

Dean Shirley Cohen responded to the comments made in the report. The following is a summary statement of her response. She said:

"Let me say that I have no disagreement with the Ombudsman's goals. I have been in office since July 1st, and he was one of the first people who called me. We discussed goals and we agreed upon goals. He also alerted me to the report he was going to give. I want to respond to the report for a few reasons. First, as he said, he sees the students who have problems and doesn't see the hundreds of students who feel that they have had an excellent experience. Secondly, the Ombudsman said that he is watching us. Let me assure you that we are watching ourselves. We are under review by a national accrediting organization, and we are in the process of sending out an exit survey to every June 2003 graduate. So, we will have the numbers. Third, we need to have the Ombudsman's statistics on the number of complaints. Fourth, Mark has been in office during a period of transition for the School of Education. We have about 50 teacher education programs, each with its own requirements established by the State Education Department. As you may know, the State issued new regulations and we had to move from the old regulations to the new regulations from Fall of 2001 until now. This semester will be the last semester where we had to run two sets of programs, one set to meet the old regulations and the other to meet the new regulations. Obviously, there was some confusion, but we are addressing this. Deborah Eldridge who serves as the Assistant Dean is my partner in this endeavor. We started a whole series of training sessions for faculty and staff on August 25th, complete with new staff handbooks, and new adjunct handbooks. We have also established new policies and procedures, and we are sending out newsletters to faculty and staff on a regular basis to communicate clearly where we need to go and how we expect to get there. We are in fact addressing most of the problems that the Ombudsman referred to. Finally, I do want to say that comparing SEEK to the other 50 programs in the School of Education does not make much sense. SEEK is a student support program and that is its sole function. Let me repeat, I don't know how many students the Ombudsman saw, because he did not provide us with numbers. However, I know that there are a huge number of students who are not dissatisfied."
Because of the late hour it was requested that discussion of the Ombudsman's report be continued at the next meeting.

The meeting was adjourned at 5:25 PM.

Respectfully submitted,

Anthony Picciano
Secretary
